Senate to Try Gag Rule Vote Today to End Filibustering

Sponsors of Rare Motion Still Far Short of Two-Thirds Backing.

Ballot on Cloture Slated for 1 P. M.

By Robert C. Albright.

After three weeks of unyielding Southern opposition to the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill, the Senate will vote today on a rarely used motion to shut off the oratory and force a ballot on the bill.

The cloture vote will come promptly at 1 p. m. Failure of the motion will sustain Southern Senators in their right to speak on indefinitely to prevent an anti-lynching vote that would certainly mean passage of the bill.

It takes two-thirds of the Senate to cut short debate under cloture, and sponsors of the motion last night were far short of the necessary number. But gains were recorded yesterday that narrowed the long odds and made it likely the Senate would split nearly fifty-fifty on the issue.

47 Opponents Polled.

Following a personal poll, Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, claimed "at least" 47 votes against cloture—about half of the Senate—but enough to roundly defeat the motion.

A Senate that had sat through two exhausting day and night sessions meanwhile eased up on strenuous proceedings before the cloture vote. Throughout the day the filibuster continued, but at twilight the Senate recessed. Majority Leader Barkley said neither side had anything to gain or lose by a night session.

Senator Richard B. Russell, jr. (Democrat), of Georgia, resumed his attack shortly after the Senate convened with a charge that the Communist Party would attempt to set up a "Negro Soviet" in the South if the bill passed.

Denounces "Gag Rule."

Russell called cloture efforts an attempt at "gag rule." He said he was convinced "there is too much righteousness and spirit of fair play" in the Senate to permit imposition of cloture.

Russell was relieved late in the day by Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, whose anecdotes of the Southland brought chuckles from a sparsely filled gallery.

Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, co-author of the bill, warned tersely against gallery "demonstrations." The chair immediately admonished galleryites they were there "only as guests of the Senate."

When the Senate meets at noon today, the hour remaining before the 1 o'clock cloture vote will be evenly divided between sponsors and opponents of the bill, under an agreement between Senator Tom Connally, of Texas, opposition floor manager, and Wagner.

Southerners are confident defeat of the cloture motion will be followed by a successful move late this week or next to sidetrack the anti-lynching bill in favor of other business. Yesterday the Navy appropriation bill was added to the inde-

By James D. Secrest.

With the threat of a substantial tax boost somewhat minimized, the House today will begin general debate on a District appropriations bill of $45,827,322 that has been cut $1,517,380 below Budget Bureau estimates.

The unusual slash, effected by the Collins sub-committee, brought down an anticipated deficit that had been estimated as high as $5,000,000, to a possible $2,000,000, but a more likely $2,500,000.

The schools and Welfare Department bore the brunt of the "economy" reductions, while the Health Department fared about as well, but no better, than it did at the Budget Bureau, and the Metropolitan Police Department came out ahead with a new precinct station and $8,000 more for undercover crime investigation.

Protests Likely.

While the bill has a few controversial items likely to stir up protests on the House floor, the measure as a whole is not likely to run the gantlet it did last year, when members of the District Committee raised numerous points of orders against what they charged were legislative riders.

Chairman Collins expects to get the bill passed by the House before adjournment tomorrow.

The House District Committee in executive session yesterday discussed the proposal of Chairman Palmisano that the Federal lump sum payment of the District be restored to $9,000,000.

Later in the day Palmisano began a poll of the 21 members of the committee to ascertain what support he would have if he made the motion on the House floor.

Asks Difference Paid.

Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, a member of the committee, suggested the Federal Government each year should pay the difference between the amount appropriated and the District revenue, thus leaving no deficit to be raised by additional taxation.

Probably the most controversial item is the transfer of the street lighting cost of $765,000 from the general revenue to the highway fund.

Among the new and unanticipated appropriations carried in the bill

Brown Blames Lack of Police For D.C. Crime

Offers 'No Alibis;' Says Force Is Doing All It Can at Present.

Inadequate facilities and curtailed man-power in every branch of Washington's law-enforcement machine was blamed yesterday by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, for the city's growing crime problem.

Residents of the District, Maj. Brown told one of the largest audiences to attend current sessions of the Washington Criminal Justice Association's open crime forums, have failed to take sufficient interest in their law-enforcement agencies.

"And without public support and necessary facilities," he said, "our fight to control lawlessness is severely handicapped."

Within the last five years, with an increased population and motor vehicle registration, Maj. Brown declared, his department has been granted no increase in personnel. A total of 25 men were added to the force, he said, but at the same time, legislation provided for 26 days annual leave and the increase helped little.

"I am offering no alibis," declared the Police Chief. "We are serving the city to the best of our ability under present conditions. I appreciate the responsibility which falls upon my department, but I do not feel we are open to any criticism."

Maj. Brown said he "wouldn't admit" Washington has a major crime problem as compared to other cities.

"Unfortunately," he told the meeting, "we have had a series of armed robberies. In every case the culprit was apprehended. We, on the other hand, have no organized gangs nor dangerous un derworld."

Capt. Rhoda Milliken, head of the Police Women's Bureau, addressed the afternoon forum and stressed the importance of approaching a solution to crime

Policeman Kills Colored Fugitive In Gun Fight Here

A colored fugitive was mortally wounded last night in an exchange of gunfire with two members of the special crime detail in an alley near Franklin and P streets northwest.

One shot from the pistol of Private Herbert B. Hebb, of the Traffic Division, one of more than 100 policemen assigned from the day shift to combat a wave of after-dark lawlessness, brought the man down after he had fired at Hebb and Private C. B. Wood, Second Precinct, at point-blank range.

O'Mahoney Confers on Plan for Federal Licensing With President.

By Sidney Olson.

With the Nation's business still awaiting a hint of the contents of President Roosevelt's antitrust message to Congress, expected within a week, attention yesterday focused on two developments along the antimonopoly battle line:

A significant speech by Donald Richberg, former NRA head, urging drastic revision of the antitrust laws to permit co-operative business action under Governmental supervision.

A visit to the White House by Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, coauthor with Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, of a bill requiring Federal licensing of all corporations engaged in interstate commerce.

Richberg, in a radio address at the annual dinner of the Northeastern Lumbermen's Association, in New York City, declared three specific objectives of desirable legislation should be:

Clearer definition of monopolistic and unfair practices, "both in the interest of enforcement and to protect honest efforts to comply with the law."

Right to Judge Sought.

Authorization for an administrative body to pass on prima facie legality of co-operative business activities, through trade associations or special agreements, in order that business organizations might undertake "a great many programs absolutely necessary to protect and promote business and employment," without undeserved prosecutions and penalties.

Clear limitations in law, so that administrative approval of co-operative agreements would not prevent private parties or Government from seeking relief through civil suit against alleged illegal combinations.

Recession Halted Late in January, Says Bank Board

"Industrial output declined in December, but showed little change in the first three weeks of January," the board said in its monthly review of business conditions.

The board also announced that its index of industrial production declined from 89 in November to 84 in December, factory employment from 94.1 to 89.0 and factory pay rolls from 89.5 to 80.9.

8 Resolutions Offered Urging Third Term for Roosevelt.

Peace with the American Federation of Labor, to unite workers of the Nation in a single front, was proposed yesterday by John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, in an address before more than 2,000 wildly-cheering members of his own United Mine Workers of America.

His voice filling the smoke-filled auditorium of the Rialto Theater, where the mine workers hung upon every word he said, Lewis declared he was willing to propose the entire C. I. O. march into the A. F. of L. February 1.

"That is," shouted Lewis, "if the American Federation of Labor will issue charters to the C. I. O. units and later call a convention to arrange the details."

The C. I. O. leader suggested, as an alternative, that the C. I. O. take all A. F. of L. unions into its organization.

Miners Stand to Cheer.

A previous proposal by the C. I. O. was for creation of an autonomous C. I. O. department within the A. F. L., which probably would have been strong enough numerically to dominate the entire federation. The A. F. L. countered with a call for the C. I. O. unions which broke away from the federation to return to that organization, after which negotiations would be conducted on admission of the unions which the C. I. O. had formed among previously unorganized workers.

William Green, president of the A. F. L., declared at Miami, meanwhile, that the federation is ready to reopen peace negotiations whenever the C. I. O. takes the initiative and indicated the A. F. L. counter-proposal still stands. He modified it somewhat, however, to avoid any charge that the original C. I. O. unions would be "deserting" their fellows, by proposing that all of the C. I. O. unions actually remain outside the federation until satisfactory arrangements had been made for the merger of rival unions in all industry.

Informed of the Lewis proposal, he said it was "the same old thing."

The mine workers stood and cheered as Lewis spoke.

Lewis said his purpose in making his proposal was to quiet "those abroad in the land who say that this labor controversy is terrible."

While the Lewis speech was the high spot of yesterday's session,

Auto Union Heads And President to Confer Next Week

By the United Press.

The White House last night announced President Roosevelt will meet Tuesday morning with leaders of the United Automobile Workers Union to discuss economic questions regarding the motor industry.

The White House said the conference had been requested by the auto union. Those who will meet with Mr. Roosevelt are Homer Martin, president of the union; Richard Frankensteen, vice president, and William Munger, research director.

The White House said subject of the discussions would be similar to that taken up at meetings of President Roosevelt with automobile manufacturers and would be centered largely on problems of annual income.

Detroit, Jan. 26 (U.P.).—Three high officials of the United Automobile Workers Union will meet next Tuesday morning with President Roosevelt to lay before him a "critical" relief situation arising from layoffs in the automobile industry, it was learned tonight.

500 Go on Strike At Steel Plants In Spite of Hague

Jersey City, N. J., Jan. 26 (AP).—Five hundred men, members of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, an affiliate of the Committee for Industrial Organization, struck late today in the local plant of the Crucible Steel Co. of America.

The strike was the first major C. I. O. move in Jersey City since Mayor Frank Hague declared he would oppose unionization of workers by the C. I. O.

Democratic Split May Kill Tax On 'Family' Concerns in House

A Democratic fight in the House Ways and Means Committee over proposed "penalty" taxation of family and other closely-held corporations last night raised a possibility that the controversial provision would be stricken from the tax bill.

The vote on the penalty proposal appeared so close that a shifting of one or two votes either way might decide the issue.

The fight yesterday was openly projected into a meeting of the House Democratic Committee on Committees. This group is identical with Democratice membership on the Ways and Means Committee, and the discussion ranged from committee vacancies to Social Security act amendments and the pending tax measure.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton proposed that the tax bill be printed in preliminary form on the basis of provisions of the sub-committee report carrying the penalty proviso. He indicated it would take about three weeks to draft the new tax bill.

Objection was said to have been raised by those who oppose the more drastic provisions of the bill. One member proposed instead that the committee first act on provisions of the report, and only those provisions approved be included in the initial draft of the bill.

The controversy will be debated today when Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee meet in executive session for an old-fashioned party "pow wow."

Opponents of the penalty tax provision said privately their chance of eliminating the special "closely held" tax would be hurt if it was included in the committee's formal bill draft.

Representative John W. McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, a member of the Vinson tax subcommittee, is leading the fight

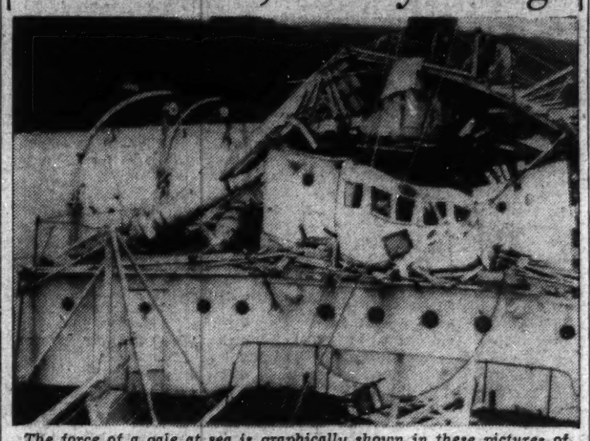
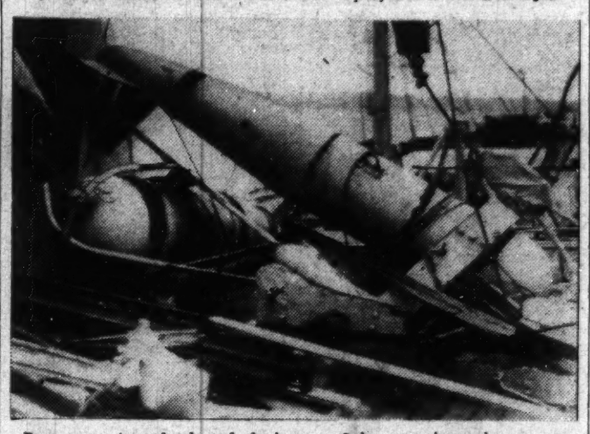
Atlantic Gale Tosses Tanker Like Cork, Destroys Bridge



The force of a gale at sea is graphically shown in these pictures of the War Bahadur, British royal fleet auxiliary tanker, which limped into Plymouth after being lashed by a gale on its homeward journey from Trinidad. The above is a close-up of the wrecked bridge.



Paravanes, torpedo-shaped devices used in sweeping mines, were torn from the main deck, hurled in the air and landed on the bridge 18 feet above the main deck. The tanker docked January 16 after the emergency destroyer Wolverine had made a 200-mile dash out to sea to escort it into Plymouth.

Bombs Kill 125 As Rebels Send Out 400 Planes

By the United Press.

Madrid, Jan. 26.—Six insurgent planes today bombed the center of Valencia, killing 125 civilians and wounding 208, the loyalist ministry of defense announced tonight in a radio broadcast.

The sudden stab at the capital came while the greatest air fleet in history—more than 400 Italian and German warplanes — bombarded government lines and villages on the Teruel front for ten hours in a merciless attempt to blast a path for Gen. Franco's recapture of the city.

The Italo-German bombers filled the sky like a flock of swallows and dropped 1,500-pound aerial torpedoes. It was believed to be the biggest air raid in history.

The defense ministry said the Valencia dead included Capt. Arnold Crone, of the British steamer Dover Abbey. Loyalist authorities extended their condolences to the British consul.

Despite the daylong burst of death from the skies, the loyalists said, government troops achieved several swift victories north of Teruel in the mountains and succeeded in occupying commanding positions along the Saragozza-Teruel highway, chief line of communications to Franco's rear.

Japan Stalled By Guerrillas, Chinese Claim

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Thursday), Jan. 27.—Chinese military leaders today declared guerrilla warfare on China's battlefronts and a revitalized air force had brought them increasing success against the Japanese invaders.

They contended the Japanese were over-extended in a vast area of central China and were being harassed constantly by fast-moving guerrilla forces striking repeatedly at "thin communication lines."

Guerrilla tactics, the Chinese said, are being employed more and more, with the result that the Japanese have been prevented from undertaking further advances.

Japanese efforts to smash Chinese defenders in central China by seizing the vital Lunghai and Tientsin-Pukow Railways, which cross at Suchow, apparently have bogged down in the face of Chinese resistance.

Information received from American missionaries at Tenghsien, about 65 miles north of the Lunghai line, indicated the Japanese virtually had been stalled for three weeks 90 miles north of Suchow.

This Japanese army moved down through Shantung Province, while another force, advancing northward from Nanking, was fighting its way to the Hwai River in Anhwei Province near Pengpu, 85 miles south of Suchow.

Chinese military leaders pointed to "regeneration" of their air force as presaging "growing opposition to the Japanese aerial offensives."

Noyes Acclaimed First Citizen As Capital Honors Long Service

Washington residents last night paid tribute to the long devotion and leadership of Theodore Williams Noyes, who, at a dinner in celebration of his eightieth birthday, was acclaimed "the Washingtonian who towers above them all."

Diplomats from several nations, members of Congress and representatives of the judiciary were in attendance at the dinner, given under sponsorship of the Board of Trade. Among hundreds who sent congratulatory messages to the veteran civic leader were President Roosevelt, Chief Justice Hughes and all the Cabinet members.

In his reply to speeches at the dinner, Noyes called for continued efforts in behalf of the city which he has championed before Congress for more than half a decade. Until Capital citizens have the vote that makes them equal to other citizens of America their right is not won, he declared.

"Now that the city is a beautiful one, let us make it also a healthful, wise, good, and above all an American one. Let us correct the civic inequities in its government," he urged.

Edward F. Colladay, president of the Board of Trade and chairman of the celebration, declared that Noyes holds the undisputed position as the city's "Number One citizen" and that "he has participated in every worthwhile movement and event in Washington since he grew to manhood."

"He is unsurpassed in greatness by any other citizen in the District of Columbia," he said.

In the principal address of the evening, Frank J. Hogan, Washington attorney, declared: "So busy has been his life, so many and so outstanding have been his public achievements, so completely has he earned the right to be referred to Mercury Due To Drop to 15 Here as Cold Sweeps U. S.

Worst Ice Jam in 30 Yrs. Crushing Big Bridge at Niagara Falls.

2 Florida Towns Report Snowfall

(Pictures—Page 16.)

Winter's icy hand gripped most of the Nation yesterday, blanketing the Middle West with snow and ice, crushing the Niagara Falls bridge with an ice jam, and leaving Michigan in the grip of the worst blizzard in history.

The weather man said the mercury would go to 15 here before dawn while snow was reported in Florida. Fair and continued cold was the forecast for today in Washington.

Thousands of tons of ice, massed in one solid mountain 90 feet high at the foot of Niagara Falls, were breaking up Falls View Bridge, one of the world's most famous spans.

Trapped in the giant glacier, the bridge, which links the United States to Canada about 1,000 feet below the mighty cataracts, was crumbling piece by piece under the tremendous pressure of the ice jam as it began to move slowly down the river.

Authorities said collapse of the historic span, which holds romantic memories for millions of honeymooners, was only a matter of time.

Crash at Abutments.

Girder after girder supporting the steel arch base of the bridge snapped and finally the section of the arch on the American side of the span cracked off several yards from the abutments.

Thousands of persons gathered in a snow-blinding gale to witness the drama of ice against steel. Police held them back after the arch cracked with a roar that sounded like an explosion.

The bridge sagged and the Canadian section of the arch began to sway. Crackling noises which resembled machine gun fire followed the breaking of the arch and indicated, bridge engineers said, that the structure had been carried off its foundation.

Two Ships Hoisted High.

When the American section of the arch cracked engineers for the International Railway Co., owners of the bridge, abandoned plans to attempt to dynamite the ice jam. It was too late.

The hydro-power plant at Niagara Falls, Ont., was enveloped completely in ice.

The two Maid of the Mist sightseeing steamers, which ply the river below the falls, were hoisted far off their drydocks and trapped solidly in the ice. It appeared certain that they would be demolished.

Through northern Michigan traffic was at a standstill, blocked by

Movie Exhibitor Discovered Alive In Alaskan Cabin

By the Associated Press.

The Coast Guard today reported the finding of Wesley F. Goss, missing Alaskan motion picture exhibitor, on Pavlof Bay.

A radio message from the cutter Spencer said that Goss, missing since January 2, was suffering from exposure. His partner, Frederick Nelson, 58, was dead. The men were lost in a whale boat while going from Naknet on Bristol Bay to Unga in the Shumagin Islands.

Their boat overturned and Nelson was drowned. Later a Coast Guard plane sighted the boat and a landing party from the cutter was led by natives to a cabin, where Goss was recovering.

Record Budget For Navy Is Put In Senate Jam

By the Associated Press.

The largest peace-time naval appropriation bill in history, providing $549,227,842 for expenditure in the fiscal year beginning July 1, took its place yesterday in the Senate legislative jam developing behind the anti-lynching filibuster.

Committee approval sent to the Senate floor a measure containing approximately $140,000,000 for warship replacements and totaling $32,684,534 more than the 1937-1938 supply measure, previous peace-time record.

Details Outlined.

As revised by the Senate Appropriations Committee, the measure carried $32,384 more than was approved by the House but $15,178,619 less than was proposed in the 1938-1939 budget.

Included in the replacement allowance was $119,900,000 for construction and machinery and $20,700,000 for armor, armament and ammunition on war vessels.

The Senate Committee increased the construction and machinery item in the House bill by $2,536,850 to permit work on 25 vessels commissioned prior to last July 1.

How Rest Will Be Spent.

Of the remainder, $18,422,100 will be used to start work on two battleships, two cruisers, eight destroyers, six submarines, one minesweeper, one submarine tender, one fleet tug and one oiler. The balance will be spent in continuing construction of two battleships, three aircraft carriers, eight cruisers, 43 destroyers, 16 submarines, one seaplane tender and one destroyer tender.

The Senate committe eliminated an item of $3,000,000 in the House bill for purchase of "strategic and critical" materials. It added $40,000 for construction of quarters at the Balboa (Canal Zone) Naval Station and $120,000 for quarters at the Coco Solo (Canal Zone) submarine base.

Legion Backs Proposals.

Daniel J. Doherty, American Legion national commander, indorsed President Roosevelt's prospective bigger Army andNavy proposals with the contention that "we ought to spend as much per capita for national defense as for candy and chewing gum."

Doherty, here for talks with Mr. Roosevelt and Secretary Woodring, told reporters:

"Now is the time to write into basic law the principle of universal wartime service."

675,000 Is Army's Goal.

A military force of 675,000 men, including soldiers under arms and those immediately available for duty, is the United States Army's objective, it was disclosed later in the day.

Army leaders hope to have within a few years a Regular Army of about 15,000 officers and 180,000 men (present strength, 165,000); a National Guard of 210,000, and an Organized Reserve of 120,000 officers and 150,000 men.

Eight thousand of the 15,000 additional men in the Regular Army would be assigned to the Air Corps, 3,000 to anti-aircraft defense and 4,000 to other specialized services.

The Army wants more anti-aircraft armament—especially 3-inch anti-aircraft guns, fire control directors, height finders and .50-caliber machine guns. A rifle of greater than .50-caliber for use on airplanes also is needed, it was said.

Motorization Is Objective.

Mechanization and motorization of the Army will occupy much of the attention of military leaders if additional apropriations are granted.

The Army's program is to motorize all supply and transport strain, 70 per cent of the field artillery and all mobile coast artillery. About 20,000 motor vehicles are required for the program and at present more than 7,000 are still lacking.

Given more funds, the Army will proceed to provide an anti-tank weapon of such a type that it can be made part of a regiment's equipment. Divisional artillery probably will be strengthened by the addition of the 105-millimeter howitzer.

Would Scrap Treaty.

Paris, Jan. 26 (AP).—The Chamber of Deputies Naval Committee, concerned over Italian battleship construction and Japanese activities in the Orient, went on record today in favor of abolishing clauses of the 1936 London Naval Treaty limiting battleships to 35,000 tons.

Rivals Save Station While Firemen Sleep

Lakewood, N. J., Jan. 26 (U.P.).—Rescue Fire Company members leaped from their beds this morning to answer a wailing fire siren.

They found three rival volunteer fire companies had controlled a blaze which caused $1,000 damage to their own firehouse.

Anti-Lynching Bill Fight Marks Emergence of Negro Race as Political Force.

By Franklyn Waltman

ENTIRELY aside from the merits of the pending bill, the Senate debate over anti-lynching legislation, which apparently will reach a climax today, presents one of the most interesting political developments of recent years. Very definitely it marks the emergence of the Negro as a great political force in his own right.

WALTMAN.

That contention is true irrespective of whether the anti-lynching bill is passed or fails of enactment in the next few days. It is true because the advocates of this legislation have fought persistently for this measure, in the face of a stubborn opposition, for almost one month now, counting the days devoted to the bill last summer.

It is true because if this legislation could be brought to a vote it would receive the approval of approximately 70 members of the Senate, having already been passed by a two-thirds vote in the House. Moreover, the national leaders of the Democratic Party either favor this legislation or are reluctant to raise their voices against it.

Behind this anti-lynching bill there is chiefly one man, who has fought, maneuvered and schemed for it for a decade or more and now because of it has at least one-half of the august Senate in an uncomfortable sweat. He is Walter White, the dapper, shrewd secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Behind Walter White, as he sits in the Senate gallery and peers down with his alert but kindly blue eyes, on a squirming Senate, are several million Negro voters who might easily hold the balance of power between political parties in more than a dozen Northern and Middle Western States.

This explains in large part why Democrats are fighting for the passage of the anti-lynching bill, instead of Republicans, as would be traditional. The Democratic Party has smashed the Republican hold on the Negro vote, and it wants to keep those voters behind the party of Jefferson and Jackson, even if it means a devastating split among the white members of the party.

Walter White, indeed, will have a great deal to say whether the Negroes of New York, Illinois, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Ohio, New Jersey, Michigan, Maryland and a number of other pivotal States will vote for a Democrat or a Republican for the Senate this year or two years hence. What he will say depends on how the Senators from those States react to the anti-lynching legislation.

And the members of the Senate know that Walter White has the influence to exercise this power. They know it, not because Walter White blusters or threatens—he is a very modest and unassuming person—but because several years ago he gave a demonstration that he can rally the Negro vote against those members of the Senate that buck the will of his organization.

It will be recalled that the opposition of the Negroes and railroad labor organizations, combined, prevented the confirmation by the Senate of Judge John J. Parker for the Supreme Court. Walter White did not sit back content with his laurels after that victory. He went out to defeat those Republican Senators who voted to confirm Judge Parker. Let this Negro leader himself tell what happened, as he subsequently recorded it in Harper's Magazine:

"In Kansas, for example, when Senator Henry J. Allen ran in the Republican primaries for re-election during the summer of 1930, he polled in the Negro districts of Kansas City, Kan., only 27 per cent of the Negro vote, where normally he would have received not less than 75 per cent of that vote, and probably a good deal more.

"In Ohio, where Senator Roscoe C. McCulloch stood in 1930 for election to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator Theodore E. Burton, Negro voters of the State, without regard to political affiliation or other circumstance, united against Senator McCulloch because of his vote and speech for confirmation of Judge Parker.

"Ohio is normally a Republican State by a margin of 400,000 to 500,000. Nomination by the Democrats of Robert Johns Bulkley, a distinguished lawyer, personally popular and a "wet," together with the inevitable reaction against the Administration because of unemployment, cut down the normal Republican majority to the point where the 170,000 Negro voters of Ohio practically held the balance of power.

"In Cleveland in the election districts predominantly peopled by Negroes, considerably more than half of the voters either supported McCulloch's Democratic opponent or refrained altogether from voting for a United States Senator . . . In Negro precincts of Toledo Bulkley polled more than three times more votes than McCulloch. In Columbus the colored wards went to Bulkley by large majorities. In Akron two-thirds and more of the Negro voters supported McCulloch's opponent. In Canton 86 per cent of the Negro vote went to the Democratic senatorial nominee."

Similar recitals are possible regarding other Senate contests as a result of the Parker roll call. Thus is explained the reason why Walter White is regarded as so influential on Capitol Hill, why those Democratic Senators outside of the South have committed themselves to vote for his bill, although many of them do not like it, and why the Senate Republicans last night were wavering in their first intention not to vote for imposition of cloture on the anti-lynching debate.

Strangely enough, the Senate Republicans do not want the bill to pass, although in the past it has been their party that fought for the Negro. In the first place, they do not want the Democrats to get credit for passing such legislation. Secondly, they do not wish cloture imposed because they wish to keep the Democrats embroiled in an intra-party conflict.

You may approve or disapprove of the anti-lynching bill; you may believe it is a good thing or a dangerous thing that the Negro has become a political power. But it is no use blinking the fact and it is a fact which will be felt in subsequent elections.

Farm Program Costs Limited To 3 Per Cent

Conferees Also Agree to Pay Off $1,800,000 in Cotton Pool.

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, of the Senate Agriculture Committee, said yesterday the farm bill conferees had agreed to limit administrative costs of the new farm program to 3 per cent of sums available.

He also reported agreement on a provision to pay $1,800,000 to participants in a 1933 Government cotton pool.

Agree on Major Issues.

Members of the joint Congressional committee, which is trying to reconcile differences in the farm bills passed by the House and Senate, said they were in agreement on all major provisions.

Chairman Jones (Democrat), Texas, of the House Agriculture Committee, said a conference report probably would be ready for Congressional action next week. Even after final agreement of the House-Senate group, he said, it will require two or three days to print the bill and report.

Follows Senate Bill.

In placing a limit on administrative expenses, the group followed a Senate bill provision. This limited expenditures to 1 per cent at headquarters here and 2 per cent in the field.

Thus, if $500,000,000 is provided for farm benefit payments this year, only $5,000,000 could be spent in Washington and $10,000,000 in field offices.

Senator Smith said the $1,800,000 cotton pool payment would come from "profits made by the Government pool," which had been liquidated. He said the payments amounted to about $1 a bale, and would go to certificate holders, except that if these had been sold the buyer would get only his purchase price.

The Senate added $160,000 to the House bill to finance numerous special Senate investigations and $30,000 for financing the Senate restaurants. In addition to appropriating these funds, the measure authorizes use of about $34,000,000 of previously appropriated money for seed and feed loans to farmers. The bill was the first to receive Senate approval since start of the filibuster against the anti-lynching bill.

"I consider an investigation of the qualifications of Mr. Burlew of far more importance than any slight inconvenience to the Department of Interior," Pittman asserted.

S. C. Cotton Farmers Ask Loss Repayment

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 26 (AP).—A legislative investigating committee charged today that South Carolina farmers whose 12-cent loan cotton was reconcentrated in warehouses by order of the Commodity Credit Corp. lost an average of $3.25 a bale as a result of underclassing their staple.

The committee, headed by Senator C. S. McCall of Marlboro County, declared that either the Commodity Credit Corp., described as the principal, or the American Cotton Co-operative Association, referred to as agent, "whichever is legally responsible, should be made to pay farmers of this state the losses they have sustained."

2 Naval Fliers Die as Ship Hits Mooring Mast

By the Associated Press.

Belleville, Ill., Jan. 26.—Two Naval fliers, circling for a landing at the Army's Scott Field, were killed today when their plane struck the top of a 250-foot mooring mast.

The fliers—Lieut. Comdr. Emile Chourre, 43, and Aviation Cadet Michael J. Ola, about 25—were en route from Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, to San Diego, Calif., where Chourre was an inspector for the Navy at an aircraft manufacturing plant.

The ceiling was unlimited and visibility good when their two-seater scouting plane swept into the mast, approximately 200 yards east of the southeast corner of the Army's landing field.

Shearing off a wing, the plane crashed and was demolished. It did not burn. Both men were dead when soldiers reached the wreckage.

The mast, built when the field was an Army lighter-than-air base, is painted yellow and black in broad, alternating stripes.

Was Air Race Official.

Lieut. Commander Chourre was an official of the National Air Races from 1928 through 1936. He was in charge of the broadcasting and public address system, receiving letters of commendation for his activities, and also for life saving in the Canal Zone in 1920 and for airplane tank designing in 1921.

He is survived by his wife and two children. His home was in Mill Valley, Calif.

Olo, who was flying with Chourre, was a native of Geistown, Pa. He attended the University of Baltimore and completed his aviation training at the Pensacola (Fla.) Naval Air Station December 17.

U.S. Judge Orders Trials for Harlan Labor Act Charges

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Ky., Jan. 26.—A demurrer to a Federal indictment against 24 coal company executives, 22 coal companies and 23 present or former Harlan County peace officers was overruled today by Judge H. Church Ford.

Trials of the defendants, all charged with conspiracy to violate the national labor relations act, were set to begin at the London term of court May 16.

The case represents the first criminal action undertaken against corporations and individuals accused of conspiracy to deny workers the right of collective bargaining and other privileges guaranteed under the Wagner act.

The list of former Harlan County officials indicted by the Federal grand jury included former Sheriff Theodore Middleton, who was charged by witnesses at the Senate Civil Liberties Committee hearing last spring of being responsible for violence during labor trouble.

Paxton Convicted Of Slaying Father By Staunton Jury

Staunton, Va., Jan. 26 (AP).—Frank M. Paxton, 22, accused of killing his father, Erskine S. Paxton, was convicted today by a Staunton corporation court jury. The jury verdict recommended he be sentenced to 40 years in the penitentiary.

The jury returned its verdict after deliberating 42 minutes.

Young Paxton, who admitted on the witness stand he killed his father at his broom factory on the outskirts of Staunton last December 8, paled as the jury foreman read the verdict.

With his head bowed and hands folded, Paxton occupied the witness chair for 35 minutes. He described his father as "my best friend." In reply to a direct question, "Did you really shoot your father?" asked by Attorney Carter, Paxton answered promptly, "Yes, sir." He also testified on direct examination that he took about $40 from his father's pockets after he had killed him.

Sculptor on Relief Wins $45,600 Apex Building Project

This model of a heroic-sized horse and man superimposed as it will appear at the Apex Building was chosen yesterday the winner of the art competition in which 247 artists participated. A companion piece by the same artist will appear opposite it. The sculptor was Michael Lantz, 29-year-old WPA instructor at New Rochelle, N. Y. The Government will pay him $45,600 for designing, carving and installing the two sculptural groups. It was Lantz's first commission.

Beating of Son Jails Workman In $2,500 Bail

Baltimorean Used Strap So Much Boy Couldn't Lie Down, Court Told.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Jan. 26.—Testimony that John Brown beat his 3-year-old son until the boy could not lie down caused the 41-year-old steel worker to be held today in $2,500 bail—highest ever set here on an assault case.

Brown pleaded guilty before Magistrate John A. Janetzke, jr. A razor strop cut into an improvised cat-o'-nine-tails was exhibited to the magistrate as having been used to whip John, jr.

Couldn't Lie Down.

Mrs. Mary Brown, employed as a domestic, said she learned of the beating only when she returned home and the boy complained of being sick. She said she told him to lie down and he replied:

"I can't mommy."

Mary, 8, eldest of the five Brown children, testified:

"Johnny was in the bathtub and soiled the tub. Father asked him who did it and he wouldn't answer. So he beat him."

She said that after the beating the father threatened to throw the boy into the stove and held him over it "with his feet almost in it."

"Beat Him for Own Good."

"I like my boy," Brown told the magistrate. "I beat him for his own good. I did not intend to beat him so badly. I had a right to beat my child if I wanted to. . . . Sunday afternoon John turned the gas on while I was upstairs. I found the burner on but not lit. He wouldn't tell me who did it. My wife never stays home to look after the children. I have to come home and cook for them and wash their clothes."

Sculptor, on WPA Relief Rolls, Wins $45,600 Federal Contract

New Yorker's Design Tops Competition List for Erection of Decorative Work on New Trade Commission Building.

A 29-year-old New Rochelle (N. Y.) sculptor, on Federal relief, was selected yesterday as the winner of the most lucrative art competition ever conducted by Uncle Sam.

Michael Lantz, a WPA instructor at New Rochelle, was announced as the victor in the Treasury's open competition for the $45,600 job of designing, carving and installing two sculptural groups for the new Federal Trade Commission Building at the apex of the Federal triangle.

It is the first sculptural commission Lantz ever has received, though his previous works have won numerous prizes.

His models, adjudged the best among 494 submitted by 247 artists, each depict a heroic-sized workhorse being held under control by a powerfully built man. The sculpture is nonsymbolic, unless one wishes to attach his own allegorical meaning to the composition, officials said.

The completed sculptures, one on each side of the apex of the building, will be 17 feet long by 7½ feet wide and approximately 15 feet tall. From the $45,600 award the artist must pay for the stone, the carving and the installation.

Lantz was born April 6, 1908. He studied at the National Academy of Design and the Beaux Arts Institute, New York. At the latter school he won first prize for the best composition of the year 1927-1928; runner-up honors for the Paris Prize of 1929-1930, and third place in the Paris prize competition of 1930-1931. He has exhibited at the Architectural League and the Pennsylvania Academy.

The jury consisted of three nationally known sculptors: Lee Lawrie, Paul Manship and Adolph Weinman, chosen through balloting of the contestants themselves. They gave honorable mention to Henry Kreis, Essex, Conn.; Donald DeLue, New York; Edmond Amateis, Brewster, N. Y., and Benjamin Hawkins, New York.

"Not in my long experience" had Weinman seen such a uniformly high quality of sculpture brought forth by competition. Weinman's many monumental works include the frieze in the Supreme Court Room and one of the pediments on the Archives Building.

Lawrie was equally enthusiastic, revealing that he has chosen models of 20 other sculptures for submission to the board of design for the New York World's Fair.

The jury was assisted by William E. Parsons, of the architectural firm of Bennett, Parsons & Frost, which designed the Federal Trade Commission Building.

Describing the winning models, the Treasury's painting and sculpture section, which conducted the competition, said:

"Both horses are in dramatic positions and are clearly designed to balance each other when placed at either side of the terrace on which the completed work will be installed. The action of horse and man in each case is dramatic, the form massive."

Members of the jury commented that the models "were designed in the great tradition of stone sculpture."

Rumania Hints Drive on Jews Will Be Eased

League Council Reports Progress in Settlement of Problems.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Jan. 26.—Foreign Minister Istrate Micescu, of Rumania, tonight indicated the anti-Jewish attitude of the government of Premier Octavian Goga would be less aggressive.

This indication, which British and foreign spokesmen said was given to British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and French Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos, was stated to have been one of the developments which put problems before the League of Nations Council well on their way toward settlement.

Both spokesmen said Micescu's attitude indicated the matter of Rumania's treatment of Jews would not be given urgent attention before the Council.

Other Developments.

They said other developments in private conversations among delegates after the formal private opening of the Council today included:

The French reached an "agreement in principle" with Turkey over the first elections in the Sanjak (State) of Alexandretta, granted autonomy last year.

Of the question of the strength of the League, Foreign Minister Joseph Beck, of Poland, was expected to join Eden and Delbos tomorrow in a general statement of faith in the organization.

A public meeting of the Council, in its one hundredth session, will be held tomorrow at 5 p. m. (noon, E. S. T.).

The interval between the private and public meetings gave Eden and Delbos time to match the Franco-British stand on sanctions against the views of the "antisanction" states.

Divided Into Two Camps.

Delegates were divided into two camps on whether to keep sanctions provisions in the League Covenant.

Micescu had indicated he might throw his lot in with Beck in raising the sanctions question in the Council meeting, something both France and Britain are anxious to avoid. At the same time, Eden and Delbos sought to reach an agreement with Micescu on the question of Rumanian Jews, which the anti-Semitic Goga government does not want touched for the present.

The general council of the Jewish Congress has petitioned the League Council to deal with the question of rights of Rumanian Jews under the minorities treaty.

Hand Grenades Kill 14, Hurt 10 In Paris Blast

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Jan 26.—Fourteen men were killed and ten injured today when two truckloads of hand grenades, recently confiscated from a Rightist revolutionary band, exploded in Villejuif, Paris suburb.

The explosions, occurring as the grenades were being loaded into army trucks for removal to the artillery park at Versailles, wrecked the municipal pyrotechnic laboratory and damaged many residences in the vicinity.

Firemen were called from Paris and two suburban towns to aid the Villejuif fire department in extinguishing resultant blazes.

Residents of Villejuif, hearing the terrific explosions, ran panic-stricken to police stations. They first thought the blasts were from a sudden air raid which they had been taught by military experts would herald the beginning of the next war.

A chemist named Gerard, who was standing on a knoll in the wooded laboratory grounds and suffered face burns, described the explosions as "a nightmare."

"It was just 9:30," he said. "A military crew from Versailles was beginning to carry the munitions to two trucks when the explosions happened. Instinctively I threw myself to the ground.

"When I got up I saw about me only the trucks in flames and tangled iron and steel, all smoking. As for the men, they had disappeared."

Bodies of some of the victims were thrown into treetops.

Police expressed the belief at least one of nine cases, each of which contained 3,000 grenades, fell off and started the general explosions. Laboratory Director Andre Kling blamed the blasts on "great clumsiness."

The criticism arose on discussion of a bill to eliminate the title of "deputy health officer" from those of the chief inspector and clerk of the Health Department.

William Miller New Chairman Of Auto Group

Capital Realtor to Head Advisory Board of Keystone Club.

William G. Miller, Washington realtor, was named chairman of the advisory board, Keystone Automobile Club, at a meeting in the Shoreham Hotel yesterday.

Succeeding Harvey L. Cobb, Miller will be assisted by Luther G. Steward as vice chairman. Steward is president of the National Federation of Federal Employes.

Accepting the appointment of J. Randall Caton as a new member representing the Virginia area, the advisory board reiterated its stand supporting the establishment of two by-pass routes to alleviate congestion in the vicinity of Peace Cross at Bladensburg, Md.

Routes proposed by the Keystone Club would divert traffic bound for northwest Washington from the Defense Highway over Jefferson avenue and through Riverdale. Traffic traveling to other sections of the city, under the club's plan, would be diverted over Kenilworth avenue into Benning road.

The board also repeated its opposition to the diversion of District gasoline tax fund and voted to support legislation designed to permit the District to share in Federal-aid highway apportionments.

A study of off-street parking facilities, particularly in the area surrounding new Government building projects, was approved and a committee comprising Caton, Edwin S. Hege and L. Perry West was named to prepare a report for presentation at the next board meeting.

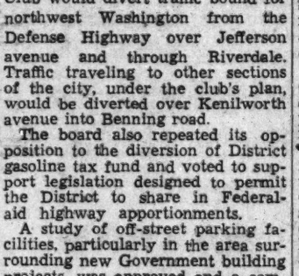
Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Injudicious, or premature, penalty doubles are more costly than any other type of bad bid. The percentage of contracts made solely through the information conveyed by these doubles is amazing. When one considers that the reverse of the picture is not much better—in other words, that countless contracts go down from three to five tricks without being doubled, as they should be—the conclusion is inevitably that a great deal of education is needed in this department of the game. Today's hand illustrates the all-revealing type double.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	3 ♣	3 ♡	Dbl.
Redbl.	4 ♣	4 N T	Pass
5 ♣	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

I am not overlooking the fact that West's three club bid, vulnerable, was highly ambiguous to East, who, not unnaturally, took it to mean that West had some honor strength. To overcall with a handlike West's is really to invite trouble. But there still was no excuse for East's double of three hearts. He should have realized that North's jump bid guaranteed further bidding by North-South. Presumably North had a "fit" with his partner's opening spade bid; otherwise, with a heart suit lacking the King and Queen, he could hardly have jumped. Thus, there did not appear much chance that the final contract would be hearts. But this made it all the more foolish for East to disclose the heart situation by his double. If by a miracle the opponents were to land in a heart contract, East would be delighted; if they didn't, East had merely put up a warning sign for the exclusive use of the opponents. Without East's double, South's subsequent play would have been sheer double-dummy.

West opened the club Jack. Declarer won, and found it necessary to draw three rounds of spades. Since this left only one trump in dummy there was no way of "stripping the hand" before attacking the heart suit—it would take dummy's last trump to ruff South's low diamond. But, warned by East's double of hearts that a very bad heart lay existed, declarer determined to effect a strip even at considerable risk, rightly feeling that it was better to try this than to lose two heart tricks without a struggle.

A low diamond was led to the Ace and a diamond returned and finessed! The Jack holding, the King was cashed, followed by the club King. Now, with diamonds and clubs eliminated in both hands, declarer let the heart ten ride, and East was helpless. A heart return would be into dummy's tenace, and a diamond return would permit a ruff and a discard.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

"Proof of Need."

The American Federation of Government Employes considers the Ellender resolution as proof, of itself, of the need of an "adequate appeals procedure under the civil service."

"An appeals board that would protect the rights and interests of civil service employes would have eliminated probably 90 per cent of the occasion for criticism that has resulted in the Ellender resolution," it was commented yesterday by Charles I. Stengle, A. F. G. E. president. "In the first place, the fact that an appeals procedure was available would have induced any official, with a tendency to be autocratic, to catch his step in order to avoid criticism himself. In the second place, if real or apparent injustices appeared in Government personnel management, the way would be open to rectify," he said.

It should be pointed out, he said, that the Ellender resolution is not directed at the Civil Service Commission but at the administration of the civil service act by administrative officers in Government agencies. The commission has no control over civil service administration in other agencies, and certainly should not be held responsible for any deficiencies in the administration of the civil service act and rules by officials of those agencies, he pointed out.

Stengle emphasized that the A. F. G. E. for years has contended that one of the most effective means of preventing injustice and of promoting morale in the service would be to assure employes the right to an impartial hearing if they felt they were discriminated against. "Any employe who must adapt himself slavishly to the will of a petty boss can do so only with detriment to his character and his efficiency," he added.

Squirrel Panic.

A citizen came in yesterday to complain that the park people are growing lax in enforcement of the ban against dogs in the public parks. Most of the signs forbidding dogs in the parks have disappeared and what he described as the utter lack of enforcement is playing havoc with the squirrels and pigeons. Time was, he said, when the ban was strictly enforced and then the squirrels were so tame as to eat out of your hand. But constant panic because of the dogs has sent them up the trees now, and they look at you, a little afraid as they look, he sighed.

Retirements.

Eight employes of the Agriculture Department retire from the service at the close of this month. They are: Jacob Otto Belz, associate biophysicist, Bureau of Plant Industry, 35 years' service; Joseph Brown, minor mechanic, Weather Bureau, 38 years' service; Charles P. Close, senior horticulturist, office of the Secretary, 26 years' service; Lee C. Corbett, principal horticulturist, Bureau of Plant Industry, 36 years' service; William R. Poore, skilled laborer, Bureau of Animal Industry 38 years' service; Paul G. Redington, assistant regional forester, 33 years' service; Anselm T. Stone, scientific aide, Bureau of Plant Industry, 21 years' service, and Frank Tharin, attorney in the office of the Secretary, 47 years' service . . . Two employes of Agriculture will retire on February 28. They are: Mrs. Carrie Zell, clerk, Bureau of Plant Industry, 38 years' service, and George B. Fiske, associate agricultural editor, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, 20 years' service.

Recent retirements were: John C. McDowell, senior dairy husbandman, Bureau of Dairy Industry, 29 years' service; Theodore Marcey, gardener, Bureau of Plant Industry, 32 years' service; Frank E. Singleton, chief accountant and auditor, office of the Secretary, 37 years' service; Herbert A. Smith, forester, 38 years' service.

Drama Dept.

The I. D. R. A.'s Theater Group offers its first performance at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow night in the auditorium of the North Building. The program consists of two one-act plays, one of which, "The Next Installment," was written by Ian Forbes, I. D. R. A.'s social chairman. "The Next Installment" is a drama of family life (around which most anything could be written) in Washington, presenting the problems of a typical Government clerk. The cast includes: Rose Sotter (Central Housing Division); Gordon Freely (General Land Office); Dorothy Foster and Howard Spies (National Park Service); Martha B. Jones and Edmund Getzin (Bureau of Mines), and William D. Zuckert (Bureau of Indian Affairs). "Afterwards," by Geraldine McGaughan, is the second offering. Its cast includes: Mary Elizabeth Watts (Central Housing Division); Lee Brown, (National Park Service); Kenfield Bailey (Territories and Island Possessions), and William D. Zuckert. Herbert S. Graham (Secretary's Office) is stage manager for both productions; Grace B. Ware (Park Service) is property mistress. The musical program preceding and during the intermission is under direction of Ervine J. Stenson (Secretary's Office). The production is under direction of Evelyn Adams, the association's Theater Group director.

Notes.

Regular monthly meetings of the New York State Democratic Club, of Washington, Inc., will be held hereafter on the first and third Tuesday evening in each month, instead of on the first and third Friday as heretofore. After traveling more than 12,000 miles and being visited by 150,000 people, the exhibit car of the American Soybean Association, which appeared in Washington last August, returned here yesterday and was exhibited at the Union Station. It demonstrated all the freakish things that can be done with the soybean. They actually make doorknobs, automobile steering wheels, paints and varnishes, glue, salad and cooking oils from the bean. The bean, itself, holds elements of romance unimaginable—and if you are interested in the story the Agriculture Bureau of Chemistry and Soils has pamphlets; at least one scientist there has many of the creations from the soybean in showcases in his office.

Chicken's Bone Removed From Woman's Throat

Mrs. Arthur Dawson, of Clarendon, Va., was recovering at home Tuesday from an operation at George Washington Hospital to remove a three-quarter inch chicken bone from her throat. She swallowed the bone at a twenty-second birthday party for her son, George Dawson, in Alexandria.

Treated first by Dr. H. A. Latane, she was taken to Alexandria Hospital, where Dr. William Burch advised her to apply at George Washington. There the bone was removed with special instruments.

Tom Brown, D. C. Artist At Williamsburg, Dead

Williamsburg, Va., Jan. 26 (AP).—Tom Brown, artist and member of the Williamsburg restoration staff for five years, died yesterday.

Brown was formerly with the Washington office of the Southern Railway. From 1903 to 1933 he was private secretary to Stephen Mather and later secretary to Horace Albright of the National Park Service. Brown studied art in Washington and exhibited there. He was a member of several artist organizations in Washington.

Gloucster, Mass., Jan. 26 (AP).—The "hectic family reations" of Burton L. Tucker, 31, and his 60-year-old wife yesterday were headed for the courts again.

Charging her husband with failure to support their three children since last August, when he was acquitted of a similar charge, Mrs. Tucker today obtained a warrant for his arrest. Tucker has twice been acquitted—in Gloucester and in New York—of nonsupport charges. His wife testified her $800,000 fortune was dissipated in a "May-December" romance with the former soda jerker.

Seven Indicted In Robberies by D.C. Grand Jury

Band of Colored Men Accused of 22 Crimes; Others Charged.

Seven colored men, alleged to have preyed upon the District from Baltimore, were indicted by the District Grand Jury yesterday on 22 robbery charges. The police attributed more than 40 robberies to them.

In addition, an indictment charging assault with intent to kill was returned after the gang tried to "shoot it out" with policemen the night two were captured.

Indictments charging robbery were returned against Harry M. Towson, Andrew Savage, Samuel T. Brady, Roosevelt Carter, Thomas O. Austin, Solomon McNair and William McKinney. Towson, Savage, Brady and Carter also were charged with assault.

$10,000 Is Estimated Loot.

From their vantage point in Maryland, the police said, the gang swooped upon Washington storekeepers and robbed them in groups. The robberies, occurring over a six-month period, brought the gang about $10,000, the police estimated.

The grand jury also indicted 15 persons for violation of the lottery laws. They were Mabel L. McDougall, Charles M. Skidmore, Edward R. Durham, George R. Schweitzer, Vanus Lowman, Edward Dennis, Jack M. Goldberg, Thomas A. Fraelleone, Carroll Buchanan, Francis J. Reese, Thomas Jones, Steve Pete Pantzis, Willard R. Williams, Mabel H. Tuckson and Doris T. Grigsby.

Because they allegedly threatened a man they believed to be an informer, two men under indictment for violation of the lottery laws were accused of tampering with a United States witness. Karlos C. Brown was threatened, the police said, by Lawrence P. Coleman and Oliver W. Bostic, who accused him of responsibility for their arrest.

Katie Lee Stegall, 33, was indicted on seven charges of forgery and uttering. She is said to have passed 11 bad checks.

Others Indicted Here.

Also indicted were Leroy Armstead and Michael Mount, joy-riding; William T. Barwick, Charles Leapley, Samuel DeVane, Thomas Jones, Willie Coleman, Jack B. Miller, Joseph P. Gray, John W. Taper, Samuel C. White and Clyde Tolley, housebreaking; Robert Green and Daniel S. Russell, grand larceny; William B. Patton, John R. Beach, Edward R. Ellis, Waverley L. Jones, robbery.

Lee Harris Smith, violation of section 72, title 18, U. S. Code; Henry B. Johnson, Charles D. Gates and Eugene White, violation of section 73, title 18, U. S. Code; Frederick H. Williams, James Medley and Thelma Carroll, violation of the liquor taxing act of 1934; Elmer Kyle Altiser, alias Al Tazzo, violation of the Harrison narcotic act; Esie Jones, violation of section 265, title 16, U. S. Code; Charles N. Smith, violation of section 8, act of July 15, 1932; Roy C. Hill, Charlie Johnson, Annie Diggs and Raymond W. West, assault with a dangerous weapon.

Walter Saunders, rape, and Carroll C. Brown, second-degree murder.

Freezing Metals From Inside Revolutionizes Casting Ideas

N. Y. Inventor Produces Heavier Copper, Endless Crystals, Wire Thinner Than Hair by New Process.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 26.—Dr. Byron E. Eldred, New York physicist, has discovered what scientists say is a new law of physics, and with it he started a revolution in casting metals.

Heavy copper, a metal denser than hitherto accepted standard pure copper, is one of the new products. Dr. Eldred gets it by causing molten metal to freeze from the inside out.

Announcement was made today when Dr. Eldred was elected president of the Engineers Club. The new physical law, as stated by its inventor, is "freezing metal." Because of the development of latent heat within its own substance, it ceases, in effect, to be a conductor of externally applied heat.

Latent heat is heat which passes out, without causing any change in temperature, in freezing.

Utilizing the latent heat discovery, Dr. Eldred draws from furnaces continuous and endless castings in the form of tubes, rods, pipes or sheets. The metals are copper, brass, bronze, steel and numerous alloys.

In prior casting methods metal has frozen in its mold by heat dissipating outward through the surface. In Eldred's new method the casting comes out of a spigot-like die or mold, endlessly and already formed.

The new method cuts down waste. Casting of even the most refractory alloys is virtually always perfect. The castings are so dense, and of such similar structure throughout, that they possess superior ductility.

The new capper castings have been assayed by the United States Bureau of Standards as having an average density of 9. Previously the density of "pure copper" has been accepted as 8.934.

The copper flows out in an apparently endless, single crystal. One result is that this heavy copper can be drawn into wire without annealing (reheating). It draws down to the size of the hollow tubule inside a human hair. It is too fine to be visible in a single strand except where the light glints. This fine stuff will burn like hair.

Dr. Eldred has many inventions, mainly for commercial processes. The best known is his lead-in-wire, universally used in manufacture of incandescent lamps. For this he received the Elliott Cresson gold medal.

Accused Slayer Weeps in Court As Defense Opens

Los Angeles, Jan. 26 (U.P.).—Paul A. Wright, accused killer of his wife and best friend, wept today when his attorney opened his defense with assertions the couple lived happily together until the night Mrs. Evelyn Wright and John Kimmel were slain.

Prospects of Wright describing how the sight of his wife and Kimmel locked in an intimate embrace goaded him into killing both were confirmed by Defense Attorney Jerry Giesler.

Giesler claimed Wright's nervous system was so wrecked from shell shock, overwork and a sterilization operation that he was unable to withstand the shock of his wife's alleged infidelity.

Giesler said that up to the killing, tranquillity and love existed in the home except for minor quarrels over money. The couple once separated because Wright who earned $600 a month as president of Union Air Terminal, complained that his wife ran up bills he could not pay.

drifts ranging up to 30 feet. Entire towns were isolated, and in Gogebic County, Mich., 50 miners were marooned, foodless since Monday.

Ten deaths were reported in three States, one of them a truck driver who suffocated in his cab while trying to open the road for a doctor on an emergency call.

The cold wave spread through the East and Southern plains. Only New England, the Far West and Florida escaped freezing weather. Ocala and Brooksville were the Florida towns reporting a light fall of snow.

Rescuers Mobilized.

Rescue workers in Michigan were mobilized to bring help to isolated communities as Gov. Frank Murphy ordered relief forces to dispense with red tape and routine to speed aid to marooned persons. Skiers carried food to 31 boys marooned in a school near Ironwood. A northbound train was locked in a drift near Nestoria, Mich.

Power lines and telephone wires were washed out in Whiteside County, Ill., as the Rock River overflowed its banks. Rivers in Arkansas were rising, some of them beyond flood stage.

The Ouachita River had passed the 39-foot stage last night, 13 feet above flood level, and was expected to rise to 43 feet within the next 36 hours. Relief agencies rushed aid to 200 families forced from their homes by the flood.

Flood threats in the Cumberland valley were lessened by the freezing weather, after rising waters had caused the death of two persons in the region.

Sub-zero temperatures were recorded at many points through the middle west. At Alexandria, Minn., the mercury dropped 11 degrees below zero, while other towns through North Dakota, Iowa and Wisconsin, reported low readings. Winnipeg was the coldest spot on the weather map, with 24 below.

Fruit growers in Florida received warning that heavy frost and freezing temperatures would cover large sections of the State today.

Smudge pots were heated in an effort to save valuable trees. Growers in Georgia, Tennessee and Alabama were similarly threatened.

Ships Are Periled.

Several ships, periled by the severe weather conditions, were reportd safe. Five persons were rescued after their two tug boats were crushed in the ice of Lake Michigan. The oil barge Pure Nulube, adrift in the Gulf of Mexico since Tuesday, was found by the freighter West Chatala and coast guardsmen went to the aid of 10 persons aboard.

The 80-foot schooner Mavis, disabled yesterday off the Virginia coast, was nearing Hampton Roads in tow of the Coast Guard cutter Dione. Aboard the Mavis were Edward Avery, of Washington, and six other persons.

A Halifax, N. S., tug last night was on its way to the disabled British freighter Pencarrow, adrift in a gale, 60 miles southeast of Halifax.

The steam trawler Ripple, disabled by boiler trouble, was being towed to Boston Harbor by the Coast Guard Cutter Cayuga.

Two icebergs, the first of the year, were reported off the coast of Newfoundland, drifting southward [illegible] the transatlantic shipping lanes.

Richberg Urges U. S. Board to Rule Combines against the President's court reorganization plan last year, said:

"I think we made a little progress. We had a very satisfactory conference. Senator Borah will confer with the President a little later."

Bankruptcy Act Discussed.

He said he had called the President's attention to developments at hearings before a Senate Judiciary sub-committee on a House-approved bill changing the section in the Bankruptcy act under which corporations may organize.

Richberg's speech was based on a two-sided viewpoint of the situation facing democracy today, as he said:

"The American people have suffered deeply in the last 50 years from the misuse of economic power. They rely all to confidently upon the individual wisdom and public service of big bankers and big businessmen.

"They learned that unchecked private control of the material and human resources might guide them into depressions and widespread suffering.

Won't Trust System.

"They are not willing today to trust their welfare either to an irresponsible system that no one can control or to the private and essentially secret control of any autocracy. That is why they turn to Government to help them. They feel that laws are made and administered publicly and that they can control and get rid of public officials.

"But the American people also know that business cannot be conducted and made prosperous by law. They know that business co-operation and discipline cannot be enforced by criminal punishments. . . . They know that if Government is called upon to guarantee a living and fix the rewards of work, the major incentives of private enterprise are destroyed."

Draws Conclusions.

From these observations, Richberg drew the conclusions that Government must encourage private business and private business must accept public responsibilities; that while individual businesses should naturally work in secrecy, businesses in groups, co-operating for their common benefit and in the public interest, should "expect and welcome the scrutiny of responsible representatives of the public."

On these reasons, he based his belief that the country needs legislation "defining more helpfully relations between business and the Federal Government." He added:

"It would go far to aid in the improvement of business if such legislation would tell the business man, to quote a recent statement by the Attorney General 'not only what he is forbidden to do, but what he is permitted to do.'"

Hits Selfish Legislation.

He stressed earnestly that "business can go far itself toward improving and making clear the interrelations and responsibilities of business and government, if business men will stop sponsoring legislation for their own immediate advantage, but which substitutes political regulation for self-government; if they will undertake to eliminate evil practices, and if they will unitedly demand that Government sanction and encourage those co-operative efforts which they are ready to carry on under the eyes of impartial, competent representatives of Government."

On a broader plane he declared that "the principles of democracy have lost ground steadily for a generation throughout the world . . ." He insisted the words of Franklin D. Roosevelt that "no government can conscript co-operation," must be kept in mind while the Nation passes through a "perilous era of transition."

Fire Squad Won't Save Cat but Aids Man Who Tried

When the Bethesda Fire Rescue Squad yesterday refused to help a man get his cat out of a tree they were forced to aid the man.

L. R. Huber, press photographer, telephoned the rescue squad after his cat had become frightened by a neighborhood dog and climbed a tree.

Huber was told the squad could not make the run to aid a cat so he decided to rescue the pet himself.

One of the limbs gave way as he climbed the tree and Huber plunged ten feet to the ground. His leg fractured, he was forced to lie on the ground while the rescue squad was summoned.

They took him to Georgetown Hospital.

$500,000,000 Damages Asked in Jersey Suit

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 26 (AP).—A $500,000,000 damage suit against Standard Oil, General Motors and other defendants was filed in chancery court today by Francis A. Howard, of Hoboken, who alleged the defendants stole his secret anti-knock gasoline from a company he formed.

Federal Witness, Terrified, Vanishes In Swindling Trial

New York, Jan. 26 (AP).—The disappearance of a terror-stricken Federal witness, 22-year-old Mrs. Ruth Bowen Moore, of Alameda, Calif., as described by U. S. Attorney William P. Maloney, injected new mystery tonight into the trial of James C. Graham and William J. McKay, Reno, Nev., gambling czars, in connection with an alleged $2,500,000 Reno swindling ring.

Graham and McKay, with three others, are accused of mail fraud and conspiracy.

Two other Government witnesses in the long-fought case—Roy J. Frisch, cashier of the now defunct Riverside Bank of Reno, and George "Lefty" Harding, former Reno police lieutenant—have also disappeared.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

BELL.

Here is a supreme example of the manner in which a comparatively minor role may be made dominant by the consummate artistry of its player. Mr. Barrymore is cast in the part of a slightly daft "criminologist" and bar-fly philosopher who observes a bogus murder trial from a convenient distance and has his own notions of what may be done about it. He attempts an equally colossal hoax and is hoist by his own petard, as the saying is. He swaggers through the proceedings with the bombastic inflation of an overstuffed nonentity and is always so completely "in character," so unerringly attuned to a delicious comedy note and so sure in his emphasis on every antic point that his performance stands out like a diamond among broken pop bottles.

That may be carrying a simile a little too far, at that, for Miss Lombard and Mr. MacMurray, long accustomed to each other's methods, are perfectly teamed in this bizarre courtroom farce, as an imaginative and scatter-brained young writer, with a fine disregard for the truth, and an ethical and eminently conscientious young attorney—her husband—who defends an enormous lie successfully in the belief that he is championing the simple truth. They turn in conspicuously effective portrayals, which nevertheless, miss the peculiarly individualistic touch Barrymore is able to impart to his humorously pathetic figure of ambitious futility.

"True Confession," while we are on the subject, is unique among recent screen comedies in that it combines with exquisite insanity a sound basic idea that is both novel and amusing. There are times when the thing slumps a bit in its attempted maintenance of a uniformly swift pace, but these occur for the greater part in the opening sequences when things seem just a little muddled and slow in getting to the later high-power developments of the story that lead to one of the most extraordinary criminal trials in legal history—with Richard Carle as the patient judge and Porter Hall as the prosecuting attorney.

I recommend this portion of the picture to all struggling young barristers who wish to learn what not to do in the pursuit of distinguished rating in the field of jurisprudence.

But it is a lot of fun!

* * * *

Preceding the projection of "True Confession" yesterday—the major feature of the bill opening tomorrow at the Earle, by the way—there was shown an especially interesting and well-made short-reel subject devoted to the little-known art of skiing. Evidently there is more to this snowy sport than meets the casual eye. Many of the finer points of cutting fancy capers on the long runners are analyzed in slow-motion and the more you look the more intricate they become. When an approximate speed of 50 miles an hour down a mountainside is reduced to a fifth of that, it begins to become apparent what mental and muscular co-ordination is necessary to keep from breaking your neck. Personally, me, I think I'll walk!

* * * *

The procession has started.

I mean to say that the parade of stage, screen and radio stars, coming to Washington for the President's Birthday Celebration swung into view with the arrival yesterday morning at 8:50 a. m.—practically the middle of the night—of Ray Bolger and Mrs. Bolger at Union Station. One of the theater's foremost dancing stars, Mr. Bolger beat the gun by a day or two and was impressed by the reception accorded him. He was met at the station by a considerable group of prominent District and theatrical celebrities and, after fighting his way through the autograph hunters, entered an official car and was whisked to the Shoreham Hotel with an imposing police escort sirening its way through downtown traffic.

"This is the first time," observed Mr. Bolger, "I have ever been in Washington when the cops were ahead of me!"

Today at 1:25 p. m., Eleanor Powell will arrive in town and at 3 she and Mr. Bolger will be guests of honor at a Congressional reception to be held in the office of Col. Halsey, secretary of the United States Senate.

It was on a comparable occasion last year that a famous kiss caused a certain Senator to remark that an osculatory adventure with the late Jean Harlow rather deflated the reputed ardor of screen embraces and Jean to say that a Senator would make a leading man who might do well in the Arctic, but not in Hollywood. However, that is beside the point.

Between the hours of 4 and 6 this afternoon, Miss Powell and Mr. Bolger will receive the press at the Mayflower.

Owing to a last-minute change in plans, Fredric March and Florence Eldredge (Mrs. March), will not arrive in Washington until 7:30 tomorrow evening. Mr. March is under a physician's care and his coming at all takes on a little of the hue of personal heroism, not to say risk.

Preceding Mr. and Mrs. March by several hours, Joe E. Brown will put in his appearance tomorrow morning and proceed at once to his suite at the Shoreham, according to a brief note from Sam Galanty, division manager of Columbia Pictures in the Washington territory. As a token of the skill of the title writers, it is interesting to note that Joe's next Columbia picture will be called "Wide Open Faces!"

* * * *

Needless to say, what is popularly referred to as "one continuous round of pleasure" is being planned for all of these visiting luminaries. Tomorrow at noon, sharp, the Loew interests, headed by Eastern Division Manager Carter Barron, are spreading a luncheon for Miss Powell, Mr. Bolger and Janet Gaynor, at which Mr. March and Miss Eldredge also are expected to be present. Later in the day, that high-strung Southern gentleman, Mr. Galanty, is heaving a cocktail party at the Shoreham for Joe E. Brown and there will be similar goings-on throughout the remainder of the week. Ain't we got fun!

* * * *

Alex Yokel, the enormously successful producer of "Three Men on a Horse," will present the Mercury Theater's modern production of Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar," at the National for the week beginning Monday, February 14.

This is the famed production by Orson Welles, youthful genius of the theater, whose extraordinary handling in a modern manner of a play of great tradition has thrilled New York and Boston and unveiled Shakespeare as a major sensation.

"Julius Caesar" is supervised, directed and lighted by Mr. Welles. There is a musical setting by Marc Blitzstein. The cast includes Tom Powers, Lawrence Fletcher, Herbert Ranson, Edmond O'Brien, Morgan Farley, Helen Craig, Murial Brassler and numerous others.

* * * *

With this and other attractions already announced for immediately impending weeks at the National, this season may turn out to be not such a dud, after all, despite earlier disappointments and dark weeks coming along where none were supposed to be.

Peering-Over-the-Horizon Note.

But when do we get the Abbey Theater Irish Players, from Dublin—if any?

Fancy Doodler.

Fanciest "doodler" in Hollywood is Fred MacMurray, star of "Cocoanut Grove." The actor took a course in show card writing once, and therefore doodles by making neatly formed block letters instead of the aimless curly-cues scrawled by most people.

Brunettes Only.

Not a blonde can be found among the 70 Spanish dancers whom Mme. Albertina Rasch is rehearsing for the spectacular "Mariachie" number for "The Girl of the Golden West." They comprise her first all-brunette dancing troupe.

Fish Phobia.

Maureen O'Sullivan's phobia is to touch fish, but she had to conquer this feeling because her role in "Madelon" calls for her to be a fish peddler.

How to Be Happy, Though Married!

FRED MacMURRAY AND CAROLE LOMBARD as they appear in a scene of rapturous connubial bliss in Paramount's production of "True Confession," an amazingly daffy courtroom comedy, opening on the screen at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater tomorrow. John Barrymore completes the trio of stars in this fantastic subject.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Jan. 26.—Settin' Around (Warner Brothers): Everyone in this studio still seems excited by the fact that Warner Brothers' "prodigal son," Jimmy Cagney, is returning to the fold. The calf is being fattened and a celebration seems in order when Johnny reports for work on March 14. Personally, I think the whole Warner Brothers-Cagney fracas has been a bit ridiculous from start to finish. It might have been tragic, too, because without this reconciliation the career of one of the screen's best actors would have been ruined.

* * * *

Jimmy Cagney and Warner Brothers consort with one another as happily as bread and butter. Good actor though he unquestionably is, he is lost without the type of picture that Warner Brothers seem to produce so well. In their pictures, he became one of the leading box-office stars; in pictures produced elsewhere, he was just another good actor.

* * * *

There never was any real justification for the legal battles between the Messrs. Warner and Cagney. He, like the hot-head that he is, made mountains out of molehills and felt—in spite of a multi-thousand dollar a week salary—that he was being treated unfairly. Warner Brothers matched his ire with their stubbornness. Personally, I am looking for some great pictures, now that everyone is again "happy about the whole thing."

* * * *

Found the "Robin Hood" company working in "Nottingham Castle", which, I believe, is the largest set ever built for a picture. Michael Curtiz, whose ability as a director is more than equaled by his unconscious skill at butchering the English language, was perched high on a parallel with his camera crew, guiding the movements of the extra mob. And he seemed very glum. "What's the matter with Mike today?" I asked Errol Flynn. Errol grinned. "It's the size of the set," he explained. "When Mike shouts into his loud speaker the sound of his voice comes back from the far end of the set a second or two later—and he has a chance to really appraise his own speech. Poor guy, he's never realized before how bad his English really is."

* * * *

On the same set, Olivia de Havilland was trying her hand, between scenes, at the sculptor's art. Armed with a huge gob of green clay, she was modeling a male head—a very presentable bit of work, too. When I expressed my surprise to see her so engaged, she very gravely explained that her "head" is inspired by the recent barrage of newspaper paragraphs which have tabbed her as romancing with first this screen hero, then that. "I'm just letting my fancy run free on this," said she, "in the hope that when it is finished it will be a portrait of my 'ideal.' Possibly it may look like someone you know . . ." Judging from the anxiety of several of her admirers, Olivia had given them the same explanation.

* * * *

Arrived on the "Jezebel" set in time to witness a formal presentation. Yesterday Richard Cromwell was standing on the sidelines, watching Bette Davis play a scene when disaster befell him at the heels of a cantankerous horse which was to be used later in the day. The nag kicked Richard very neatly, very efficiently, though not too hard, right where kicks should be bestowed, and poor Dick, not in the least hurt, but somewhat chagrined, lost his balance and fell sprawling into the scene. With admirable presence of mind the cameraman kept grinding away and recorded the event. Today, with Bette acting as mistress of ceremonies, the film was officially presented to the most embarrassed youngster in Hollywood.

With Shirley.

Jimmy Durante, who literally has been led by the nose into world-wide fame as a comedian, is going into "Little Miss Broadway." The new Shirley Temple starring vehicle is scheduled to start on January 24.

Japanese 'Scape Annoys Anna May

In view of current events in the Orient anything Japanese annoys Anna May Wong, Chinese actress.

She had, up to last week, occupied an apartment overlooking a Japanese garden. The view was a constant source of vexation to her, particularly as callers were constantly calling attention to it.

Miss Wong, currently in "Dangerous to Know" moved to a furnished home in another part of Hollywood, far from any landscaping suggesting Japan.

Ina Claire Will BeSeenMonday In New Comedy

Washington Actress Heads Imposing List of Stars in New Bills.

Ina Claire will return to the Washington stage next week in the stellar role of Gilbert Miller's production of Frederic Lonsdale's new comedy, "Once Is Enough," opening Monday night in the National Theater, following a three-day tryout in New Haven. This is the first stage work from the Lonsdale pen in several years and will be celebrated by the assemblage of a notable cast to appear in Miss Claire's support. The leading man in the production will be Hugh Miller, a distinguished star of the English stage, who appeared with Katharine Cornell in John van Druten's "Flowers of the Forest," which opened in Baltimore and never was seen in Washington, and earlier was cast as Capt. Stanhope in Gilbert Miller's production of "Journey's End." Mr. Williams was prominent in the cast of the London production of "Grand Hotel," was in the British film version of "Sorrell and Son" and the Hollywood filming of "David Copperfield." There will be the usual matinees at the National next week on Wednesday and Saturday.

"I Met My Love Again," costarring Henry Fonda and Joan Bennett, will be the screen attraction at the RKO-Keith Theater for the week bgeinning tomorrow. This is the picture that introduced the "sneak preview" to Washington several months ago at another downtown theater, with Miss Bennett and Walter Wanger, the producer, both in attendance. The story is a compelling romance, with interludes of melodrama and comedy, that should register emphatically with the public. Owing to its popularity as an inclusion in this week's program at RKO-Keith's, Walt Disney's cartoon comedy of "Donald Duck's Self-Control" will be held over. A new issue of the Pathe News also will be shown.

Frank Morgan's first individual starring vehicle, "Paradise for Three," will be the major screen attraction at Loew's Capitol Theater next week, beginning tomorrow. Supporting the star in this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer comedy-romance will be seen such luminaries of the cinema as Henry Hull, Mary Astor, Reginald Owen, Edna Mae Oliver, Herman Bing, Florence Rice and Robert Young. The picture already has been briefly commented upon on this page as an exceptionally deft example of enlivening entertainment. On the stage of the Capitol next week a pretentious vaudeville revue will be featured by Sid Gary, Stuart and Martin, the Richard and Adrienne Dancers and numerous other specialists. The Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin's music will round out the bill.

Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray and John Barrymore are the trio of stars to be seen in "True Confession," the foremost screen feature of the bfill announced for the week beginning tomorrow at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. The comedy centers in the strange developments that spring from the activities of a wife who would rather lie than eat. Miss Lombard and Mr. MacMurray have been together in three earlier films; Mr. Barrymore and she in "Twentieth Century," one of the productions that first brought this brilliant young actress to major attention. Una Merkel, Edgar Kennedy, Lynne Overman, Porter Hall and Richard Carle are other important members of the cast. The second stage show, under the direction of Harry Anger, will be "The Sidewalks of New York," enlisting the services of Irene Beasley, Carl Freed and His Harmonica Lads, Fenwick and Cook and Norman Harris and Sylvia Shore in "Modes Comiques."

Joan Crawford, Spencer Tracy and Alan Curtis, supported by Ralph Morgan, Mary Phillips, Oscar O'Shea, Elisabeth Risden and Leo Gorcey, have scored so effectively this week in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of Katharine Brush's novel of "Mannequin" that this attraction will be continued for a second week at Loew's Palace Theater, beginning tomorrow. The story is one of contrasted strata of New York life that affords fine opportunities for everybody in the cast. The short-reel auxiliaries also will be retained for the continuation of the run.

Walter Connolly, Jean Parker and John Howard are cast in the pivotal roles of "Penitentiary," announced as the outstanding feature of next week's bill at the Metropolitan Theater, beginning tomorrow. The nature of the story is eloquently expressed in the title. The bill, as usual, will be augmented by abbreviated camera subjects and a new release of the composite newsreel requiring a full 10 minutes of running time.

Samuel Goldwyn's overwhelming simulation of nature gone wild, "The Hurricane," adapted from the South Seas' novel of the same name by Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall, will be accorded a repeat F street engagement, beginning tomorrow, as chief feature of the Columbia Theater's bill for the new week. The principal roles in this extraordinary feature are played by Jon Hall, Dorothy Lamour, C. Aubrey Smith, Mary Astor, Raymond Massey, John Carradine, Thomas Mitchell and a huge cast of native Polynesians.

At the Little Theater next week, beginning on Sunday, the chief feature of the screen bill will be a revival of the Warner Brothers' production of "The Story of Louis Pasteur," in which the title role is taken by Paul Muni. Josephine Hutchinson, Anita Louise, Fritz Leiber, Donald Woods and Akim Tamiroff appear in the principal supporting roles in this admirable biographical drama.

"Little Men" will be the offering brought to the National Theater on Saturday morning of this week by the Children's Theater of New York, under the managerial direction of Clare Tree Major. It was written by Louisa May Alcott as a sequel to "Little Women." The action takes place in a boys' school. An able cast will be seen in the roles of primary importance.

The new attraction at the Gayety Theater for the week, beginning with the customary Sunday matinee performance will be "Charmaine's All-Star Revue," in which the stellar role, as goes without saying, will be played by Charmaine, a French entertainer, who is described as "the handsomest thing on heels." She is further described as the most beautiful young woman ever to appear on the Gayety stage—not excepting the renowned Ann Corio. Jack LaMont will be the fetaured comedian in this new burlesque revel.

Among the featured short-reel subjects on the new bill at the Trans-Lux Theater, beginning tomorrow, will be "Jungle Juveniles," a Pete Smith animal novelty; a Walt Disney Donald Duck cartoon, "On Ice," and Lew Lehr and his "Newsettes." The bill will be based on newsreel coverage of the world, as usual.

New York, Jan. 26.

WHEN PETER ANDERS, the Ross kidnaper, attacked John Edgar Hoover in the Wisconsin woods, he confided—after being subdued: "After all, gentlemen, I promised to confess all, and I did. I promised to bring you to the bodies, and I did. I promised to get you the ransom money, and I did. But I didn't promise not to escape. I owed myself that one try" . . . When Anders was introduced to Hoover, he said: "I know you're a big shot, Mr. Hoover—but you annoy me as much as G-men do." He thought it was Herbert Hoover . . . Vincent Astor will back the new Ballet Russe . . . Joe Kennedy witnessed the Toscanini broadcast Saturday. "I thought you'd gone to London," the new Ambassador was told. "This," he replied, "is more important."

N. B. C. FINALLY HAS AGREED to broadcast "One Big Union for Two," one of the hit tunes from Labor Stage's "Pins & Needles." Their censors, however, insisted upon one change—in the lines: "I've decided that the only way I could woo you is to take a hint from the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O." N. B. C. changed the last line to "Is to take a hint from the way the headlines seem to go" . . . Stackpole's new catalogue includes Alfred Lief's biography of the oldest member of the U. S. Supreme Court, but you couldn't tell that from the title—which is misspelled: "Brandies" . . . Hendrick William van Loon, whose new book will deal with the average little man through the ages, has tagged his character-subject "Chaym Schmeel."

Voice of Chapman Gets Oddest Task

Gladys Swarthout's husband, Frank Chapman, last week went to work as a stand-in.

He stood in for John Boles, not in the customary way, but as a singing voice stand-in, a practice which has just been inaugurated by Boris Morros, studio music head, where Miss Swarthout and Boles are making "Romance in the Dark," costarring John Barrymore.

Chapman's "standing-in" occurred o- the music scoring stage, and his baritone voice sang Boles' arias while the orchestra established "balance" with the singing.

This spared Boles' voice, and he was required to sing only during the actual recording.

The practice of using a "singing voice stand-in" was launched during p oduction of "Romance in the Dark." Bernice Alstock, a young mezzo soprano, was appointed to stnad-in for Miss Swarthout.

Bank Failures Eat Into FDIC Reserve Fund

First Time Operating Expenses Have Failed to Cover Payments.

By the Associated Press.

Bank failures in the last six months cut into reserves of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation for the first time since its organization four years ago, Chairman Leo T. Crowley announced yesterday.

In every six-month period, the corporation was able to pay off depositors and pay operating expenses out of income from its investments without using any of the principal of the $385,340,146 fund built up from insurance assessments upon the banks.

Expenses totaled $5,656,482 in the last half year, including $4,284,911 spent to pay off depositors, while interest on investments brought in $4,896,872.

Forty-eight insured banks failed in the last six months, compared with 23 in the first half of 1937. Crowley indicated, however, that some of these failures were inevitable because there were too many banks in some communities. Besides failures, 185 other banks were eliminated through mergers and voluntary liquidations.

These losses from FDIC rolls were offset in part by the insuring of 46 newly formed banks and 35 old ones. For the year as a whole, the number of insured banks declined a net of 176 to a total of 13,853.

Since its founding, Crowley said in his annual report, the FDIC has paid or enabled the payment to 282,968 depositors of all except about $4,000,000 of the $75,822,000 they had deposited in 179 banks which failed. The $4,000,000 loss was all to large depositors because the FDIC insures deposits only up to $5,000 each.

Pedometer Needed By Ernst Lubitsch

Director Ernst Lubitsch has never been known to go on a hike in his life—yet he's Hollywood's champion walker!

It was proved recently by Arthur Camp, statistically minded property man attached to the Lubitsch unit which currently is shooting the new Claudette Colbert-Gary Cooper starring comedy, "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife."

Camp, fascinated by the director's habit of ceaseless pacing between shots, kept track of the number of yards covered by Lubitsch in the course of the day's work. By measuring the length of the sound stage, he was able to keep close tabs on the distance the director traveled when he'd gone on one of his walking sprees.

Camp discovered that Lubitsch walks an average of 2 miles a day—and, since "Bluebeard" has a 48-day shooting schedule, this means that he'll have walked a grand total of 96 miles by the time the picture is finished!

Rose Queen Cast As Film Princess

A new road to stardom was opened last week by Cheryl Walker, who was catapulted into Hollwood's firmament as a "talisman blonde" by way of the Pasadena Tournament of Roses, over which she presided as queen.

Miss Cheryl was the first rose queen in the 49 years of the festival's history to be so honored. She was placed under contract by Paramount for an important part with Olympe Bradna and Gene Raymond in "Stolen Heaven," continental music drama.

The tournament queen is a student at Pasadena Junior College, where she has studied singing and dancing. Miss Cheryl will have a singing role in the film's elaborate festival scene.

Temporarily.

President Roosevelt's appeal to industry to maintain wage levels is obviously couched as the statement of a general principle. And it is a principle with which economists as well as those who reason from a purely humanitarian basis are sympathetic. Nobody is helped when general purchasing power declines, and widespread wage reductions of course have just that effect.

But when the President intimates that prices can be scaled down while wages remain up he embarks on much more controversial ground. In some cases this is doubtless possible; in others it will be as surely impossible. For wages are a very important factor in the determination of prices, and to lower the latter perceptibly without affecting the former can be as difficult as making an omelet without breaking eggs.

In the past many business executives have been disposed to let wage rates alone take the strain off the price-lowering process. To urge business to explore all other channels of economy first is reasonable. Mr. Roosevelt, however, goes rather further than this. He contends that "those who get the profits when business is good must bear the losses when business temporarily is slack."

If emphasis is on the word "temporarily," this too can be approved. But the argument does make it highly pertinent to ask if the Administration thinks it possible first to force distribution of profits and then to insist that their accumulation should permit a reserve out of which losses can readily be carried.

Parole Board's Needs.

Many and varied are the explanations that are advanced for the District's extraordinary crime rate. The city, it is claimed, is underpoliced; the courts are inconsistent in their sentences; inadequate relief funds force jobless men to steal; a capital naturally attracts all manner of riff-raff; and so on. Beyond question, each of these points may have some bearing on the problem. But it has remained for the chairman of the District Parole Board to put his finger on one certain factor in Washington's lawlessness: The small effort made by the city to rehabilitate criminals released from jail.

Until five years ago the supervision of discharged Washington convicts was the responsibility of Federal parole officers. In 1932 a District Parole Board was organized comprising three citizens who volunteered their services. It was felt the city needed its own parole system. The board still serves, sitting on all parole applications and deputizing its supervisory duties to three salaried field officers.

On them falls the important work of verifying the residence of every released prisoner, of assisting him to find employment and generally supervising his necessarily difficult return to normal life. Of 368 men paroled during the last fiscal year, the field officers found themselves unable to cope with only 26 who were forthwith returned to prison. Eleven had committed new crimes.

In addition to assuming responsibility for paroled men, however, the board and its deputies are also charged by law with the supervision of men free on what is known as "conditional release." Regardless of character, previous record or any other considerations, prisoners win 20 to 25 per cent reductions in prison sentences by good behavior. Thus, a man sent to jail for "two years" must be released at the end of 19 months and 6 days if he has a clean prison record. For the remaining 4 months and 24 days of his term he is the responsibility of the Parole Board. Accordingly, in addition to the 368 parolees assigned the three parole officers last year, there were also 659 "conditionally released" men—almost 1,000 in all.

Patently, it is a virtual physical impossibility for three officers to keep check on 1,000 men. The result is that many hardened and embittered former convicts roam the streets of Washington at will. To help them or force them back to respectable ways, more parole officers are needed. Those the Parole Board has requested, only to be consistently rebuffed on Capitol Hill. This year, however, Senators and Representatives seem at last aroused to the disgrace of the Capital's crime rate. Some broader view of the Parole Board's insufficiencies should result. Perhaps part of the money to be saved by abandonment of the National Training School for Girls could be transferred to the board's account.

A Wrong Approach.

Adoption of a resolution by the New York State Assembly urging Congress to pass the Wheeler-Johnson bill designed to bar shipment of products of child labor from interstate commerce calls attention to the shortcomings of this method of dealing with the problem of child labor. A good deal of support for the bill comes from those who have been discouraged by the failure of the States, by the required three-fourths vote, to ratify the pending child labor amendment dating from 1924. Reasoning that half a loaf is better than no bread at all, disappointed reformers are ready to indorse a thoroughly unsatisfactory proposal for Federal intervention.

The Wheeler-Johnson bill would forbid shipments of the products of child labor into States where their sale is prohibited and it would also ban all interstate commerce in such products after a specified date. The sponsors of the proposal are themselves doubtful of its constitutionality. For that reason they have included in the measure several types of prohibitions against shipments, hoping that if one provision fails another may stand. However, these objections aside, the proposal would not eradicate the evils of child labor in purely intrastate trades and industries. And it would set up a dangerous precedent for passage of further restrictive legislation creating barriers to the free flow of interstate commerce.

If laws may be passed, for instance, banning interstate shipment of goods made by child labor—as defined by Federal law—what is to prevent passage of laws banning shipment of goods made by so-called exploited workers. And what is to prevent Congress from classifying as exploited all who work over a designated maximum number of hours or receive less than a designated minimum wage? In short, the possibilities of putting industry under Federal control by such indirect pressure methods are too grave and too far-reaching to be ignored.

Moreover, the administrative machinery needed to enforce legislation of the kind proposed under the Wheeler-Johnson bill would be very cumbrous and would probably function very badly. At the same time, it would place serious obstacles in the way of that free trade between the States which the Constitution attempts to preserve. The only way, therefore, to deal vigorously and effectively with the problems presented by child labor is to work for a constitutional amendment shorn of the objectionable features of the pending resolution passed in 1924.

The Vandenberg amendment, which carries the indorsement of the American Bar Association, contains safeguards against possible abuse of regulatory powers by Congress. In view of the strong public sentiment in favor of Federal action to eradicate the evils of child labor, it is believed that the requisite number of States would speedily ratify a substitute amendment such as that sponsored by the Senator from Michigan. Certainly there is no harm in trying. In the meantime, efforts should be concentrated upon eradication of the evils of child labor by the States themselves instead of turning for relief to stop-gap legislation that would throw the door open to new kinds of evils.

Abuse Of Debating Privilege.

Announcing opposition to plans for shutting off further discussion of the anti-lynching bill, Senator McNary observed that "This is the last body in the world permitting full and free debate, and a vote for cloture would be a vote against minority rights in the Senate."

Mr. McNary rightly values the unique Senatorial privilege of untrammeled, unhurried discussion of legislative proposals. But the sort of filibustering that is now preventing action on the anti-lynching bill is not calculated to impress anyone with the importance of free and unlimited debate. On the contrary, the prestige of the Senate as a deliberative body is distinctly impaired by such abuses of the debating privilege as the last few days have brought forth.

The purpose of debate is to permit a thorough discussion of the issues involved in proposed legislation and to give friends and foes of a measure ample opportunity to state the reasons for their position. In that way members of a legislative body are enabled to vote intelligently. Or, at least, they cannot plead ignorance as an excuse for failing to do so. Filibustering, on the other hand, is not undertaken for the sake of elucidating moot questions and preparing the way for legislative decisions. It is designed to wear down opponents without relying upon relevant arguments to turn the scale against them.

Recent appeals to race prejudice and long-winded, irrelevant discourses are unfortunately weakening the force of the strong and valid arguments already advanced against the anti-lynching bill. Six-day speeches, or even six-hour speeches, will throw no new light on the questions which it raised. Indeed, they merely confuse issues now fairly well defined and defeat the real purpose of democratic processes.

Under analysis, Senator McNary's desire to protect and preserve the debating privileges enjoyed by the Senate is an argument for rather than against some kind of positive action to put an end to filibustering when it becomes offensive to the rule of reason.

The Problem Of Irish Unity.

At their recent meeting in London, Premiers Chamberlain and de Valera discovered the happy fact that the path to Anglo-Irish conciliation and friendship is no longer as rock-strewn and impassable as it used to be.

Both the English and the Irish, it appears, are ready and willing to let bygones be bygones, to forget ancient grudges and act in harmony with regard to those many matters where they have a mutuality of interest. It is in a friendly and accommodating spirit, therefore, that the negotiations begun in London are being continued.

Even the prickly problem of Ulster seems unlikely to prove a bar to successful conclusion of the present negotiations. Nonetheless that problem cannot be ignored. Indeed, it was primarily to prove how strongly the people of North Ireland oppose union with the south, and favor the maintenance of the present tie with Great Britain, that Lord Craigavon, the Ulster premier, recently dissolved his parliament and ordered an election.

In a recent interview with Harold Callender, of the New York Times, Lord Craigavon flat-footedly turned down union as a solution of the Irish problem. Said he:

> The man has not been born who could rule all Ireland . . . If we were joined to Southern Ireland we should have exactly the same situation as in Spain, and it would last longer.

With this assertion Premier de Valera takes strong issue. Speaking to Mr. Callender in Dublin he suggests that the special position of Ulster might adequately be guaranteed by leaving to the Belfast Parliament its present area of jurisdiction, and present powers as a legislature for the six counties, while giving all Ireland a parliament constituted on a basis of proportional representation. This parliament would, so far as Ulster is concerned, be endowed with the reserved powers at present retained by the British Parliament.

Mr. de Valera denied any intention of coercing Ulster or attempting to establish a dictatorship over her. By implication he forswears any attempt to unite Ireland by force or purpose of solving the problem by means other than mutual agreement.

The moderation of this approach is worthy of emulation. Without question, any political union of the two branches of the Irish people will prove an extremely difficult task. Statesmanship of a high order is required. But as Maj. Gen. Hugh Montgomery, himself an Ulsterman, points out, some workable partnership between the north and the south ought not to be "beyond the wit of man to devise."

The Muse To The Rescue.

Dr. Joseph Auslander thinks it may be up to the poets of America to take this unhappy world by the hand and lead it out of the valley of woe. Since nothing that the politicians are likely to think of will be much help, and since the psychiatrists, the economists, the proletarian novelists and the breath controllers have all had their whirls, we suggest that Dr. Auslander give the bards the signal to go right ahead.

Dr. Auslander's point, as we infer from the interview published yesterday in The Post, is that our greatest need is confidence and that the poets, once we permit them to have confidence in themselves, are the ones to give it to us. In a lecture recently Dr. Auslander pointed out that you cannot legislate confidence, nor can you wrap it in cellophane and sell it at so much per pound. But a poet can give you confidence for nothing and almost, as it were, against your will.

Now it would stand to reason that if poets can do that they are very important people and deserve something better than the neglect or the half-amused toleration they have lately been getting from the rest of us.

This importance was recognized by Plato, who, however, held that poets, because of very power, were dangerous, and so proscribed them in the republic. On the other hand, Aristotle, that amiable bourgeois, found that poetry provides a useful and even necessary outlet for passions that, left to themselves, might tear the world to pieces, which indeed appears to be happening now.

The question, then, is whether, once they are loose upon the earth, it is possible to recapture, so to speak, all this human violence and by some alchemy of the soul transmute it into song. We are inclined to believe that it is. At any rate, we think we could show that times of wholesale calamity such as ours have, oftener than not, concluded in wholesale lyrical outbursts, as, for instance, the age of Jonson and Shakespeare following the terrible War of the Roses.

Therefore, we earnestly suggest to the hard-headed brethren not to smile too scornfully at Dr. Auslander's notion that the "men of dreams" may succeed where the men of brass tacks have all too lamentably failed. Rather they should pray that he may somehow be right in his prophecy of a bardic revival.

Many of us long for the good old days of several years ago when people went nuts about things that didn't particularly matter—like yo-yo tops and jigg-saw puzzles.

Whatever a newspaper paragrapher can't understand, he pokes fun at. This gives him an unlimited number of subjects upon which to comment.

The Race Problem.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Is the discussion of the proposed anti-lynching bill going to be "The Awakening" for colored Americans, or is it going to prove disastrous to America as a whole?

According to our most illustrious and intelligent Senators south of the Mason and Dixon line it is a world catastrophe crashing upon their already so-called burdened shoulders; but to my mind it is the awakening of the new South, a South which has no place for the Bilbos, Baileys, Connellys, Heflins and the rest of those Southern gentlemen who speak of purity of race, white supremacy, and the like.

Thankfully, however, those great Immortals, framers of the Constitution, the groundwork upon which this mighty Nation was built, had other ideas for America and her component elements.

The colored man in the South—in fact, in the United States—doesn't ask or necessarily want social equality, but, as is his right, he demands political and labor equality. It is left with the individual, in the final analysis, as to with whom he socializes.

"No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States," and so on down through the fifteenth amendment, the Constitution calls for political equality for all citizens "regardless of race, color or previous . . . servitude. From Senator Bilbo I quote, "I do not hesitate in making the statement that if every Negro voter north of the Mason and Dixon line had on yesterday been moved south of the Smith and Wesson line, this bill would not receive a dozen votes on the floor of the Senate." This from a man who represents citizens of the U. S. A. He also states that "It is the dream of every Negro in this country to return to his fatherland in Liberia, Africa, where the black will be happy in his native land." We, the colored people of the United States, dream of happiness in this, our native land, living from day to day free of the bitter hatred our white brothers bear toward us, for what reason? Here we expect to stay, fighting for our birthright, until a power stronger than the words from a bunch of prejudiced Senators removes us to a more promising land.

We have had a great and uphill fight; the obstacles in our path have been numerous, and still are, but the fight has just begun; now, with the help of the more broad-minded and intelligent members of the other race who are throwing prejudice and racial hatred aside, who are working for a more beautiful America, where all races of men shall dwell together in perfect harmony, loving each other according to God's own doctrine, "love thy neighbor as thyself." Upon these six words rests the strength of any people banding together in these United States, a new era, namely, the new South and the new Negro.

Grant And Civil Service.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: John Bertram Oakes in The Post Impressionist column of January 26 strenuously objected to crediting President Arthur with civil service reform, arguing that President Hayes is a "forgotten man."

He might have stressed more that President Grant was the first President to demand reform in the civil service and that he kept the subject constantly before Congress through four annual messages and several special messages.

On March 13, 1871, Congress partially yielded to his appeals by giving "the necessary authority to the Executive to inaugurate a civil service reform"—thus shielding themselves from the importunities of office-seekers and throwing the entire responsibility upon the President; but Grant immediately selected a commission composed of well-known advocates of reform, who devised rules and regulations governing appointments.

On December 19, 1871, however, Grant again asked for further legislation to make the rules more binding, and on April 18, 1874, he said, "If sustained by Congress the rules can, after the experience gained, be so improved and enforced as to still more materially benefit the public service." But Congress refused to appropriate funds for the commission and repealed that section of the act authorizing it.

There was then nothing for the President to do but abandon his persistent attempts to bring honesty into Government service, and on March 8, 1875, heads of departments were notified that all appointments would thereafter be made as provided in the act of March 3, 1853. But the seed sown by Grant between 1870 and 1875 sprouted and took root within seven years.

Japanese Pride.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The gesture of the Red Cross in sending $1,000,000 to China, Japan having refused its help, is a magnificent proof of international good will. It is always the duty of seekers for harmony and amity to try to see "the other fellow's point of view." And there should now be effort to see the Japanese point of view as well as that of the Chinese.

We may rightly ask why Japan refused the offer of the Red Cross. Her people are poor and the financial fabric of Japan is badly tattered. Her refusing the Red Cross' offer testifies to her pride and her combat with China testifies to three things:

1. That the fire eaters and gangsters of Nippon are out of leash.

2. That the propaganda to justify their action and to keep the people of Japan in ignorance of the facts has been extraordinarily successful. They believe that hundreds of their compatriots in China were murdered in cold blood; that but for the intervention of Japanese troops more would have been slaughtered; that more than 200,000 Chinese are incorporated into the Communist army and that communism and China are the same thing.

3. That their patient and guilt-free country has been unsuccessful in suing for the friendship of ungrateful China; that wicked China has betrayed her friendship so that the war with her was inevitable and obligatory.

Only a few Japanese know the truth. More know part of the truth. If they could only know the whole truth it would set them free and would make it possible for them to withdraw honorably from a war which is neither a war of self-defense, a war to put them on an economic living basis or an honorable war which can ever be remembered with pride.

A SEEKER AFTER TRUTH.
Washington, Jan. 25.

Federalist View.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The feeling of Southern Senators that the anti-lynching bill unfairly picks out but one single crime where official laxity or negligence can be proven to justify intervention as correct. Many Americans would like to see Federal intervention made possible in other cases, such as where powerful and corrupt State and municipal officials render impotent our national constitutional guarantees.

Once the door is opened for Federal intervention in cases of official laxity there is no question but that the public will demand it to be opened wider to take care of such cases as these. Every few years some particularly vicious example of corrupt officialdom leads to a wave of public indignation, which will inevitably call for Federal intervention, once the principle of its justice in any case be established.

Unnecessary Waste.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In noticing the announcement the school lunch fund has been exhausted and those school children facing hunger, I cannot help being outraged at this community for the waste it allows to go on through the loss of milk bottles. Every customer who purchases a bottle of milk in this city has to pay for the bottle, with no hope of refund. Why does this practice have to go on? Why can't the thousands of pennies for these milk bottles be saved and put in the school lunch fund? Why do milk bottles have to be thrown in the trash in this city (the only one in the United States I know of where this occurs), while the consumer has to pay and pay and pay?

Merit Vs. Preferment.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There was a beautiful letter in The Post of January 24 from J. S. Dawson, who seems to class civil service employes of the Government as being lower than pigs. Patronage appointments are his favorites, he states.

Mr. Dawson should not overlook the fact that to get under civil service you have to be able to read and write; furthermore you have to demonstrate that ability in a competitive test. On the other hand, if you are a friend of those in power, you need not even speak English to grab yourself off a $2,000 job; neither do you have to work after you get it. Who would stand up for patronage over civil service knowing this?

Because one civil service employe was caught in a crooked bit of business, Mr. Dawson immediately puts all other civil service workers in that class.

One sure way to make the merit system a thing of beauty and a joy forever is to make everyone pass a competitive test. Treat everybody alike and give no one preference because his uncle knows a Senator who is friendly with a bureau chief. Let examination marks determine a man's fitness.

Causes Of Crime.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A study of causes of crime in the District of Columbia, by the civics classes of the Armstrong High School recently, found the following:

Lack of moral sanction due to lack of religious training; poor homes and home training; "oppression psychosis" due to racial discrimination; types of movies and literature displayed in poor sections; health and mental conditions; difficulty in adjusting rural habits of life and action to city demands, and a general lack of restraint of expression and action due to failure to play and enjoy games in which the other fellow and rules imposed law observance.

Anti-Horn Blower.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I would like, through your letter columns, to thank those who have written letters of protest to you against the useless horn blowing which is getting worse and worse as time moves on.

Public sentiment may do much to curb this nerve-racking nuisance. Other places have eliminated horn blowing after midnight and while cars are standing still, but here in Washington, which ought to be a model city, nothing is done. Why is this so?

Mr. Young's Diction.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I protest that Shirley Povich quotes Nicholas E. Young as saying:

"Son, they ain't gonna give you anything in this meeting. I just wanted to tell you."

Mr. Young was an educated and cultivated gentleman. I am sure that his friend, Clark Griffith, would resent having him classified otherwise by the alleged quotation.

Corner Sunshine.

HE is ebony black. He had a broad, full mouth of gleaming white teeth and a perpetual and expansive grin that shows them off to best advantage. He has a magnificent physique, is as quick as a cat, fast as a deer and strong as a bull. His sunny smile and contagious laughter puts everyone around him in a good humor instantly.

He sells morning papers only at the corner of Fifteenth and L streets.

I don't know his name. He calls me "Jedge." The man ahead of me is generally "Captain" and the one behind "Doctor." Just why I am "Jedge" I don't know. Maybe that is the ranking he gives customers who buy both morning papers from him. But all of us get the same greeting. "It's a fine morning and you're lookin' fine. Keep it up, and God bless you."

"Yes sir," he exclaims, spotting me in the distance. "Here comes a customer that wants a double-header. Thank yo', Jedge. Have a double-header this morning, Doctor? Just The Post. All right, thanks; God bless you."

And so he has been doing to Fifteenth and L for about six or seven years now—selling papers and spreading sunshine; assisting the aged across the intersection and helping anyone in distress in his neighborhood.

Several winters ago, during a heavy snowstorm, when the sidewalks were just about impassable in the early morning, he couldn't be bothered taking in money. "Help yerself, Jedge—and you, too, lady," he called from the middle of the street. "Pay me the next time you come along. I can't bother with them papers now; I gotta help these folks outa trouble."

And there he was in the middle of things, doing what he could to to get stalled motorists and pedestrians moving.

Thousands who come down Fifteenth street in the morning have seen him, heard him, talked with him and given him a cheery word and a kindly smile even when not stopping for a newspaper purchase. His friendliness and bubbling good humor are such as to inspire the like in others and many a morning grouch has been dissipated in his presence.

When not on the sidewalk selling papers, or doing this or that for his customers, he generally hops upon the concrete parapet at the edge of the apartment house terrace and paces rapidly back and forth. Then he will stop suddenly, fold his arms behind, throw back his head, breathe deeply, expand his chest and stand there motionless for a period. That is a pose in which many have caught him and have been attracted by his striking physique.

One morning in a hurry, I called to him sharply while he was on the parapet gazing skyward. "Better come down here where the business is," I said. "You won't sell many papers up in those treetops."

In less than a second he had leaped lightly to the ground beside me, banishing my ill humor instantly with his sunny smile and delicious chuckle. "Oh, no, Jedge, I ain't trying to sell anything up there. I jest likes to stand up there and watch the sky. Ain't it beautiful? It makes me just think and wonder. Don't you wish we knew more about it?"

And then: "Don't you want a double-header this morning, Jedge? Just one? All right; here you are. Fine morning. You are looking mighty fine this morning. Keep it up. God bless you."

In all the years since he first took up his post at that corner he has never, to my knowledge, missed a single morning. Hence it is reasonable to assume that he never has been ill in that time. Certainly I never have heard him complain. Which is all the more remarkable when one considers that winter and summer he is on that corner, usually hatless and coatless, rain or shine. In the heaviest downpour in summer he will be found on the job smiling through a veritable sheet of rain pouring down over his shiny head and face. The first snow of this year, on January 19, found him out early the next morning, bareheaded and in his shirtsleeves, enjoying it to the fullest and declaring to one and all alike that it was a beautiful morning!

He keeps his papers well protected from the elements, but for himself apparently wants and needs very little covering, even to an ever-loosened and partly open shirt-front.

There is just about one time when he will button his shirt collar and put on a sweater. That is on a sudden warm day, and sometimes on very hot days. Why? I don't know. I never have been able to get him to stand still long enough for me to query him and get answers about anything except papapers. Showman? Yes; but intentionally or unconsciously I cannot say.

I do know, however, that he is a good anodyne for anyone starting the day snapping and snarling and with a sour outlook on things in general.

If you're in the neighborhood some morning drop around and buy a paper from him. You'll get a lot for your 3 cents in addition to the news of the day.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Evening At Chez Capone.

THEY WERE DOING a big business the other night in Chez Capone, the swank rendezvous of people who really matter, when suddenly a man left the bar, walked back to the orchestra, interrupted the music and said to the leader:—"Hey, wait a minute! Hold still a minute!"

PEGLER.

"Well, what's with you?" the leader demanded.

"Nothing's with me," said the man. "I'm all right. I'm strictly all right, friend, but what's with that drummer of yours?"

"Nothing is with that drummer. He has got a card. He is union. Show him your card, Wallie."

The drummer showed his card.

"Drummer's card," said the man. "All right for drumming the snare drum. But what's he doing socking that brass? You got to put on another man to sock that."

"A whole guy we got to put on just to sock that brass?"

"You heard me, and I got a guy outside."

Mr. Chez Capone, the proprietor, thought fast and decided to put on the extra man to sock the brass thing rather than have pickets around the plant, and maybe have his waiters jerked out in the midst of a big night's business.

So the sock-brass guy climbed into the stand, the agent of the musicians went back to the bar and things resumed.

A few minutes later the agent's ears went up, lifting his hat two inches off his head. He strode back to the orchestra again shouting, "Now what's with that drummer?"

• • • •

"I TELL YOU nothing is with that drummer," the leader said. "He didn't sock that brass. Your sock-brass guy done it. Hey, sock-brass, didden' you sock that brass gag?"

"Who said anything about brass?" the agent yelled. "That drummer whanged that triangle. Why haven't you got a triangle-whanger in your line-up?"

"You mean I got to have a whole guy just to whang that dinky little triangle a few times a night? To hell with it. Wallie, don't whang that gag no more. We will just cut it out of the orchestra."

"You do and we jerk you out of here so fast you trample yourself in the rush," the guy said. "You will use a full crew or no crew."

So the agent put a triangle-whanger up on the stand, and things went along all right until the agent heard a couple of those Cuban gourds with the bird-shot in them. It was the drummer in dutch again. His card didn't permit him to shake those gourds, and the agent wouldn't leave till they put on another guy. The orchestra platform was getting crowded, and it was still more crowded when the agent caught the drummer kicking the trap for the big drum, and put in a big drum trap-kicker to do that.

• • • •

WELL, as the night wore on the agent made life more and more miserable for the leader and Mr. Chez Capone. He put on a guy to play hoofbeats with the cocoanuts, a guy to play the block and another one to swish that wire egg-beater thing. He put in another to play the sandpaper thing, and still another to clank the cowbell—all jobs formerly performed by the drummer in his spare time. He put in a man to play the boat whistle and another to blow the rubber raspberry gag, and every time the poor drummer would reach for one of his accustomed gags to give it a little sock or twirl or blow the agent would shove through the Chez Capone, bouncing the customers around to put another hand to work.

The orchestra overflowed the platform and spread all over the dance floor and up and down the room, and all but eight were new hands brought in by the agent to assist the drummer under the full-crew rules of the union.

Ordinarily the Chez Capone doesn't close until 4 a. m., but at a quarter of 1 Mr. Chez Capone took a look around the plant and clapped his hands.

"All right," he said; "turn up the tables and turn out the lights. We got a full crew at the drums but no room left for customers. Here's the key and here's the license and the lease, and here's my regards to the union," with which he seized the raspberry gag from the raspberry gag player and blew a long and vulgar note.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The President Confers With A Small Business Man.

President—Good morning, and won't you be seated? You're a small business man, I take it.

Business Man—I never felt smaller.

President—It is my conviction that by taking the pulse of the little fellow the Government can best take the pulse of all industry.

Business Man—Take anything you wish. I've so little left of anything that I won't miss a few pulse-beats.

• • • •

President—Frankly, do you think business is as bad as the pessimists would have it?

Business Man—No, but on the other hand, I know it isn't as good as the optimists are insisting.

President—Do you think we are in a real depression?

Business Man—If we are not, then I must have my roller skates on backward.

• • • •

President—I didn't know business men wore roller skates.

Business Man—Oh, yes. They give us the sensation of movement in times when we know we aren't getting anywhere.

President—What this Administration wants to do is to protect you, to widen your opportunities, to eliminate hazards, to open new vistas, to lighten your burdens. Do you see any objections to that program?

Business Man—I have only the natural feeling of a business man that it is always a major error to try to fill too big an order in too short a time.

President—The Government proposes to be your guide, your friend, your pal and, in a sense, your partner.

Business Man—It's a swell idea but somehow or other I always like the feeling of being in business for myself.

President—As a small business man, you are smaller than I thought. I assume you realize the evils of monopoly.

Business Man—Yes, sir, it certainly burns me up thinking of all the dough those fellows can make.

President—I'm not speaking of it from a standpoint of envy.

Business Man—You would if you had your store in the middle of the block like I have and they had all the best corners.

President—Have you read "The Sixty Families?"

Business Man—No. That sounds to me more like a book for a fellow in the laundry business.

President—You should read it when you get time.

Business Man—If things don't pick up I'm going to have plenty of time.

President—My feeling is that business needs direction, regulation, control. What do you think?

Business Man—I'm for it if you limit it to big business, but I don't want to put myself in the position of sticking out my own neck.

President—It has been charged that this Administration has frightened business. Have you been frightened by it?

Business Man—Not so much as some people, but there's a reason for that.

President—What's the reason?

And Now.. Fulpan On Monopoly

Petunia Congressman Tells Patsy Plumper Where To Go.

By Louis M. Jiggitts.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia,
Dec. 28, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

We are all excited by monopolies and we feel that you are the reason. You remember I wrote you in behalf of the Petunia Housewives Association Against the High Cost of Living last spring and called your attention to high prices which didn't seem to be bothering the Government then. We had decided to crusade against this but after writing you and getting your splendid advice we dicided to quit for the summer on account of hot weather.

It looks like from here that the Government has decided to blame the recession on high prices which were caused by monopolies and we have decided that you must have insisted that the Government find some good reason quick. As we called the high prices to your attention we feel that we are the cause of it, and we are interested in knowing what step you are going to have the Government take about prices now.

Please let me know what you think about all this as I have a personal reason for wanting to know about prices.

Yours sincerely,
MRS. PATSY PLUMPER.

P. S.—Why do they call your fine football team the Redskins?

Washington, D. C.,
Dec. 30, 1937.

Mrs. Patsy Plumper,
Petunia.

My dear Mrs. Plumper:

I regret that the Congressman has consented to confer with several other leaders today and cannot reply to your interesting inquiry. But in his absence I can assure you that the Congressman is giving consideration to the question of monopolies and if he finds that any monopoly has been embarrassing the Government he will insist that appropriate action be taken in the premise.

Assuring you that it has been a great pleasure to give you this information, I am

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE.
Secretary.

P. S.—I suppose it's because they treat the people of Washington like the Indians. They can't vote.

Petunia,
Jan. 1, 1938.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

We are more excited than ever over your monopoly hunt and what you are going to do to them on their premise.

Mr. Slim Slack says the trouble is that you have now got business in as big a fog as Congress is and nobody knows which way to go. We ladies don't know either.

You might explain just what a monopoly is and why you don't like it.

Yours sincerely,
MRS. PATSY PLUMPER.

P. S.—Do you mean that if they don't like a Congressman they can't vote against him?

Washington, D. C.
Jan. 4, 1938.

Mrs. Patsy Plumper,
Petunia.

My dear Mrs. Plumper:

I regret again that the Congressman is busily engaged in an important conference with other leaders which is requiring his best thoughts. In these crucial days the Congressman's time is not his own, it belongs to his country. In fact, this great fidelity to duty is proving quite exhausting.

But I can assure you that as soon as he returns to the office he will be delighted to explain why Congress is in a fog, and will take great pleasure in telling you ladies where to go.

A monopoly exists when someone does something nobody else can do. This is not good for the people as a whole, and the Attorney General takes action in appropriate cases.

Assuring you that it has been a great pleasure to give you this information, I am yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE.
Secretary.

P. S.—Washington doesn't have a Congressman.

Petunia,
Jan. 6, 1938.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I am so sorry to hear that you have become exhausted from having to think so much for the other leaders and I hope you have now recovered from the conference. Mr. Slack says he guesses the conference must have been pretty exhausing on all the Congressmen in it.

Do you mean that Congress is a monopoly? It is always doing something nobody else would do. I can understand why this is not always good for the people but I want to know just what the Attorney General can do about it?

Your postoffice enemy, Mr. Hezekiah Hawks, was over here in Petunia today saying that you are responsible for the recession and if we kept you up there we'd have a real Fulpan Depression which he said would be the worst kind we could have. But I know you will be glad to hear that Mrs. Fannie Sitz got in an argument with him in front of the postoffice and told him you are not any more responsible than Congress and no one could ever accuse Congress of being responsible. Mr. Hawks didn't know what to say to that and just went off mumbling something about admitting that you are not responsible.

Please let me know if you think prices are going up or down as I want to buy a new kitchen stove but if you think the Government is going to get prices down by doing something to the monopolies, I can wait.

Yours sincerely,
MRS. PATSY PLUMPER.

P. S.—Mr. Slack wants to know what right Washington has got not to have a Congressman when everybody else has to.

Washington, D. C.
Jan. 8, 1938.

Mrs. Patsy Plumper,
Petunia.

Dear Mrs. Plumper:

I take the greatest pleasure in answering your very interesting letter.

The price level has been a subject of grave concern. The other leaders and I have been giving the matter our most serious consideration and while it has proved perplexing to other students of economy both here and abroad, we are confident of an ultimate solution. We previously were of the opinion that prices were too low and should be raised and we enacted the NRA. Our aim is of course to create a price level which will be satisfactory to everyone. You realize, I am sure, that in a country of 130,000,000 souls more or less it is no easy task to please everybody. But I am glad to encourage you with the happy thought that I am by no means discouraged.

Assuring you that it is a pleasure to give you this frank account of the progress which we leaders are making toward the solution of a difficult problem, and trusting that you will not hesitate to call upon me whenever I can be of further service, I am yours very sincerely,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia,
Jan. 15, 1938.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I appreciate the wonderful information you have given me but I still don't know whether to buy the kitchen stove or not. Please advise me by return mail.

I told Mr. Slack what you said and he said he hoped you wouldn't aim at the wrong target this time.

Mrs. Fannie Sitz and I were talking about things we have been reading in the Congressional Record and we would like to know why they amend the bills so much. We would like for you to explain this.

Yours sincerely,
MRS. PATSY PLUMPER.

P. S.—Why don't they include you in the American families that run the country?

Washington, D. C.,
Jan. 18, 1938.

Mrs. Patsy Plumper,
Petunia.

My dear Mrs. Plumper:

You want to know about amendments. I am glad to inform you that when a bill reaches the floor of the House there are usually about 434 opinions as to what it should provide and so amendments are offered to include these opinions. If many of them are passed the bill is often not itself by the time a final vote is taken after the third reading in theory. Sometimes when a bill is so changed Congress gets orders that it is better not to have the bill at all than have the amendments so they just kill the whole thing which usually satisfies everybody as practically nobody likes it it by then anyway.

You want to know whether or not to buy a kitchen stove. This will depend upon whether you want to cook at home or eat in a restaurant.

Assuring you that it has been a great pleasure to give you this further information, I am yours sincerely, WILLA DOOLITTLE.
Secretary.

P. S.—The Congressman has always made it a rule to remain in the background. Publicity is so distasteful to him.

Petunia,
Jan. 11, 1938.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I told Mrs. Fannie Sitz about your explanation of amendments and she said it inspired her to write a poem which she says is a double quadrant being two closely related four-lined poems entitled "Life History of A Bill, or Why," as follows:

Congress gets a little bill
It's meaning clear as snow
They then amend this little bill
Till what it means no one can know.
They read it once, they read it twice,
Theoretically they read it thrice,
And then they get outside advice
And promptly kill it in a trice.

We are still interested in knowing just what you are going to do about the monopolies.

I am also still undecided what to do about the kitchen stove.

Yours sincerely,
MRS. PATSY PLUMPER.

P. S.—What is a holding company?

Washington, D. C.,
Jan. 13, 1938.

Mrs. Patsy Plumper,
Petunia.

My dear Mrs. Plumper:

Please inform Mrs. Sitz that I am certain the Congressman will appreciate her very excellent poem. It so beautifully expresses just what has happened to a number of splendid bills the Congressman has introduced in the past few years.

I am sure that the Congressman will be greatly pleased to learn that you are still interested in what he is going to do to monopolies.

And I know that the Congressman will be delighted to learn what you decide to do with the kitchen stove. He is always interested in the activities of his constituents.

Trusting that we may have the pleasure of hearing from you in the future, I am yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE.
Secretary.

P. S.—A holding company is a company that will soon be holding the bag if Congress carries out orders.

Petunia,
Jan. 20, 1938.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I suppose I haven't made myself clear about the stove. I want you to tell me about it. Are you going to run prices up or down?

Today Mrs. Fannie Sitz published a poem in the Verbena County Weekly Bugle and Gazette which I know you will be happy to hear. She said she is experimenting like the Government, only she is experimenting in poetry instead of business as she wants to be a well rounded poet and believes she soon will be while she doubts if the Government will ever be a well rounded business man. She said in the paper that it is "a crossed sextant being a six-lined crossword poem with a letter from the name of some notorious person in each line, the first name of the person running from left to top catty-cornered to right bottom and the last name vice versa entitled 'Meditation.'"

Congress is often in a Fight
But It sometimes does Us right
Unless some Clever Leaders go astray
On some Plan Everyone says nay
But Alas, they are the Rulers so
Nothing's left for us but—wO.

Yours sincerely,
MRS. PATSY PLUMPER.

P. S.—I am still worried about the people of Washington not having a right to vote against anybody. It doesn't seem fair.

Washington, D. C.,
Jan. 22, 1938.

Mrs. Patsy Plumper,
Petunia.

My Dear Mrs. Plumper:

The Congressman read the remarkable poem of Mrs. Sitz with the greatest pleasure. But I regret that he cannot answer your fine letter as he has retired with a headache. However, I hope that you will inform Mrs. Sitz that he enjoyed her crossed up sextant and congratulates her on being so well rounded.

I am glad to inform you that the Congressman is earnestly considering advising the public to buy. He has stated that since the Government tried to spend us out of the depression the people might try buying us out of the recession.

Assuring you that I am delighted to acquaint you with this important advice of the Congressman, I am

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

P. S.—I am glad to inform you that the Congressman is seriously considering the possibility of giving Washington a republican form of government.

Petunia,
Jan. 24, 1938.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I have already bought the stove. I felt sure that you had a good reason for not choosing to give certain information so I consulted my horoscope instead which told me yesterday was a good day to buy it and I did. But I feel so much better to know that you and my horoscope agree and I am glad I have helped to end the recession. I appreciate all the splendid information you have given me.

Yours sincerely,
MRS. PATSY PLUMPER.

P. S.—How can you do that in a Democratic Administration?

Washington, D. C.,
Jan. 26, 1938.

Mrs. Patsy Plumper,
Petunia.

Dear Mrs. Plumper:

I am grateful for your very interesting letter and I can assure you that I have enjoyed serving you. It has always been my great pleasure to render assistance to my constituents, and I trust that I may continue to give you such service for many years to come.

Yours very sincerely,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

"Look! Leland has installed indirect lighting."

In tomorrow's Post, the Gallup Poll reveals Great Britain's sentiment for a trade pact with the United States.

Gloomy Future

Japanese Hopes, Chinese Realities.

THE TOKYO ASAHI, one of the leading newspapers of Japan, has revealed that a sum in excess of four billion yen (roughly $1,100,000,000) is to be set aside by the Japanese government for the prosecution of the war in China.

This fact throws a revealing light on Japan's increasing difficulties. It also shows that there is now a growing awareness in Tokyo as to the realities of the situation facing the island empire.

The sum in question happens to be considerably in excess of the whole ordinary budget of Japan which, for the current fiscal year, was fixed at 2,815,000,000 yen and for the next fiscal year at 2,870,000,000 yen. In both cases, be it noted, half the expenditures are earmarked for what might be called "normal" military purposes. The war budget is additional. In other words, Japan, during the next fiscal year, will spend close to six billion yen on its war and war preparation account. This represents an increase of approximately 50 per cent over the current appropriation.

• • • •

IT SHOULD BE clear from this that the Japanese authorities are no longer as sanguine as they once were about the imminence of China's collapse. Peiping has fallen; Shanghai is in Japanese hands; Nanking, too, is now garrisoned by troops of the Mikado; and two Japanese armies are converging on Hsuchow, the great railroad junction point in east Central China. But the war goes on.

The Japanese had hoped that at a certain point in the fighting one of two things would happen—either Chiang Kai-shek would decide that further resistance was futile and, throwing up the sponge, would accept the peace offer made to him by Japan through the German Ambassador or it would be possible, following the capture of Nanking, to set up a puppet government with which to make peace.

Neither has occurred. Nor despite the terrific blows inflicted upon them by the invaders and the alienation from the Central Chinese government's control of many rich provinces, has China's military capacity been destroyed.

It is quite possible that the recurring reports of Chinese victories at Tsining, Hohsien and other places are exaggerated. It is far from certain that the Chinese will be able to retain Hsuchow. But, in any event, the Japanese military task is not likely to get much easier as time goes on. Already guerrilla warfare on a large scale has begun in the northwest and in the Yangtze areas and even with a force several times the size of the armies they now have on the mainland the Japanese may find it difficult to impose their will on China.

• • • •

SOMETHING has clearly gone wrong with Japanese calculations and it is not difficult to discover what this something is. They simply forgot to make proper allowances for the changes that have occurred in China during recent years.

Since Chiang Kai-shek had steadily pursued a policy of retreating in the face of Japanese pressure in the past they banked on his doing so again after a face-saving show of resistance not much different in kind or extent to that in which he indulged during the Shanghai fighting in 1932. But even if the Nanking government did choose to resist, they calculated, such resistance would mean only the prolongation of the war by a few weeks or months. Then the show would be over, peace would be made and Japan would be in effective control of China.

What they ignored was the very real spread of nationalist feeling in China, a circumstance indicated by the agreement reached last December at Sian between the Chinese Red leaders and Chiang Kai-shek, following the kidnaping of the latter.

• • • •

THREE VERY REAL dangers now face Japan. In the first place there is the possibility that the war may last long enough to bankrupt her.

This possibility seems, at the moment, to be remote. The capacity of nations to continue financing a war long after the point when in the opinion of experts they should have reached the point of exhaustion has been demonstrated on numerous occasions during recent years. But the fact must not be ignored that, more than any other great power, Japan's position is vulnerable since so much of the supplies needed in war-making must come from abroad and can be paid for only by gold or goods. The shrinkage both of Japan's exports and her gold reserve during recent months is significant in this respect.

But it is more likely that before the point of absolute exhaustion is reached the internal situation in Japan may reach the point of crisis and compel the Tokyo government to make peace with China without achieving its objective. As taxes are piled on the already over-burdened backs of the Japanese people, grumbling is certain to increase. After all, the prelude to the present undeclared war was, in Japan, a thinly veiled revolt by the civilian element against militarist domination. Temporarily suspended during the first months of the war, this struggle may break out anew and in more virulent form than ever if peace is not achieved in the course of coming months. No wonder, then, that one essential point in the Japanese peace program is an indemnity from China. In this way the Japanese people are assured that the load they now are forced to carry will be eased when peace comes.

Then, finally, there is always the possibility that the longer the war lasts the greater the possibility of outside pressure—military in the case of Russia, financial and economic in the case of other powers. The fact that Japan, which blew so hot on the subject of Great Britain's allegedly sinister role in the Far East, is now blowing cold shows that the Tokyo government realizes the danger of unnecessarily antagonizing a power which may be driven into strong action despite its previous hesitations.

Although, as the peace terms offered to China would seem to indicate, Japan's policy regarding China continues to be one of seeking to extend its hegemony over that land, it is also becoming clear that the struggle in the Far East, so far as Japan is concerned, is more and more taking the form of a rear-guard action intended primarily to forestall collapse.

Money And Music

By Doron K. Antrim

Pipe Organs In Banks.

THE OTHER DAY I was in a hurry to get some cash. Rushing over to the bank, I found long queues at every window.

Then suddenly, without any preliminaries—music, soft and subdued. An orchestra was playing a Jerome Kern selection. I looked around with some of the other customers for sight of the musicians.

• • • •

ON EDGE with curiosity, some days later I asked a teller about this admixture of money and music.

"It's just something a little extra we are offering to our customers," he laughed. "The music is piped in over telephone wires from a central studio and heard through amplifiers. Selections range from popular to classical and they're all serenade-like and subdued; you can take 'em or leave 'em. So far we have found it particularly effective during rush hours, making waiting less tiresome."

• • • •

LOOKING FURTHER into these strange goings-on, I found other banks here and there that were trying out the idea. One in Chicago was having an electric organ playing during the day's peak business hours.

(Rotarian Magazine.)

Tom McCarthy

Basement Swingtime.

THEY USED to applaud. No more, though. The audience has softened up, and possibly grown fat in its critical faculty. It's been receiving too much for its money.

But in the old days—eight or nine months ago—it was a thing to behold. Strong men paused at the hardware counter to gaze dreamily into space, past Aisle Nine with its array of light plugs, double sockets, fly swatters and tire repair sets.

McCARTHY.

Middle-aged women were seen to halt in the midst of carnivorous assaults on rolls stuffed with barbecued beef, pickle relish and thinly sliced onion. And the young things—well, they simply tossed the love bracelets and manicure sets back into the trays, while their shoulders twitched and their feet took up the rhythm of the lilting melody, as it swept through the basement . . . soared over section six (glassware, cocktail sets, light bulbs and china door knobs) . . . filtered into section one (basement rear—false hair, safety pins, elastic arm bands, garter rosettes) . . . before coming to rest among the tinware, duplicate keys and metal wastebaskets.

There could be no doubting it. It was always a triumph. And the tribute was never long withheld. Barbecue beef on rolls were laid down among the door knobs, metal hinges and bi-swing tie-hangers . . . and hands swung lustily in the perfect tribute.

"They applauded," Miss Virgie Perry said. And then she added modestly, "But I don't think it was so much my playing. I guess the girl they had on duty here before me, must have been pretty bad."

Miss Perry, and her colleague, Miss Frances Crain, operate the music counter at one of the F street Five-Ten-and-Up Stores. And playing the sheet music over for the customers is part of their job. But it's not as impersonal a job as you might expect. They have their audience.

• • • •

"WHEN I first came here about nine months ago, Miss Perry said, "the people used to applaud the playing. But now I guess they're getting used to us. You see we have some listeners who come in every day."

According to Miss Perry and Miss Crain the music section of a five-and-ten-cent store is a haven of enchanted retreat for dozens of Government workers who would rather spend their lunch hour with a chorus of "Dipsy-Doodle" and a "ham-on" than with a plate of caviar at the Mayflower.

Nearly a half a dozen of their listening audience dash in from F street daily, request their favorite tunes, tap their toes to the scintillant rhythms of "She's Tall, She's Tan, She's Terrific," or "Josephine," before wandering back into the humdrum existence of a Government office, revived and possibly even glorified.

"After being on the counter for a couple of months," Miss Perry said, "it's no trouble to recognize dozens of the customers. We get so we know just what new piece they'll want us to play. Of course we can generally tell that by looking at them. Even if they've never been in before.

"The school kids like all the most popular numbers . . . just as they come out. And the same choices hold good up through the twenties. But the people on the other side of 35 seem to want the pieces that were popular back in the days when they were stepping out to their first dances. They 'go' for things from the 'Desert Song,' 'Chloe' and 'Margey.'

"The real old-timers though, want 'Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes,' 'Mighty Lak a Rose' and 'Where the River Shannon Flows.' They don't want us to play those pieces over. They just want to buy them."

• • • •

RIGHT NOW, the most requested number in the basement music room of the F street Five-and-Dime store is "Bei Mir Bist du Schoen." Runner-up is "Gold Mine in the Sky." The young ladies figure they play those tunes upwards of 40 times a day, with "Bei Mir Bist du Schoen" way out ahead.

Though Miss Perry claims that 40 renditions in a day of any one song is quite enough, it hasn't begun to bother her. She plays by ear as well as by note, and when the usual tempo of the song begins to bore, she admits to indulging in a bit of swing . . . "it helps to break up the monotony."

Usually in the success stories it is the young lady playing in the five-and-ten music department who is heard by a radio sponsor and drafted for the air. Miss Perry reversed that process. Visiting in Washington from her native State, South Carolina, she played a program over WOL. The store manager heard her and she was drafted for the music department of the "five and ten."

She admits to having her own favorite piece—she's only playing it eight or ten times a day—and it's called "True Confession." And she never buys sheet music herself.

"I sit home and listen to the radio," she said, "and then I can pick out the tune on the piano. It saves money, doing it that way."

Jersey Picketing Ban Is Upheld by Court of Appeal

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 26.—The New Jersey Court of Errors and Appeals upheld today an injunction against picketing granted by Vice Chancellor Leon Berry in a labor dispute at the Newark plant of the International Ticket Co., last July.

Berry wrote an opinion supporting his action in which he held closed-shop contracts "illegal and unenforceable." A judge of the errors court said, however, that the court decision was not based on the closed shop question, but on chancery court's right to restrain violence.

State branches of the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization had joined in the appeal to the State's highest court, asking settlement "once and for all" of the closed shop's legality.

Brown Blames Lack of Police For D.C. Crime

through care and supervision of juveniles.

Asks Public Help.

The Washington Criminal Justice Association, she said, can go far in promoting a co-ordinated crime control program. A police department, Capt. Milliken added, is measured by the interest taken in it by the public.

The last few years, she declared, have seen a considerable increase in crime among women. Where inmates at the Women's Bureau averaged 22 several years ago, the present average is 34. Commercial prostitution, said the policewoman, presents the greatest problem.

"Women don't usually commit as exacting and colorful crimes as men," she said, "but they do just as good as job and offer just as grave a problem."

An average of 5,000 women and 1,300 children pass through her bureau each year, said Capt. Milliken. The domestic life of juveniles is an important factor in their future lives, she continued, and efforts are now being made to attack the situation from this angle.

She agreed with a suggestion from the floor that a separate court of domestic relations be established in the District to handle juvenile and parent cases alike.

The Second Police Precinct was described by Capt. Milliken as harboring the city's worst crime problem. She said children in that area have grown to look upon crime as a normal part of daily routine.

Her outline of the Second Precinct was supported by Maj. Brown.

He expressed gratification that Congress had finally acted to restore the old Second Precinct Station—now the Women's Bureau—and said that jailing facilities are at present inadequate to cope with the vast number of prisoners awaiting court action.

Maj. Brown struck also at repeated delays in the presentation and prosecution of criminal cases in District courts.

"These delays are dangerous," said Maj. Brown. "They are a decided advantage to the criminal. I know of several cases which have been pending nearly a year."

Hits Low Bonds.

The oft-attacked policy of releasing known criminals on minimum bonds also was scored by Maj. Brown. He cited one case where a man was released in bond of $10,000, was rearrested for another crime and again released in the same bond.

"I contend that dangerous criminals should be held in jail while awaiting trial and should not be permitted to roam the streets and commit new offenses."

He outlined the work of his five Boys' Clubs and said members of the Police Department are attempting to make youngsters their friends and not their foes.

Work of the Criminal Justice Association was again discussed by Dr. James Allen Nolan, managing director. Final sessions of the crime forum will be held in the Willard Hotel at 11:30 a. m. and 4:45 p. m. At the morning session David A. Pine, acting United States District Attorney, will be the speaker with Newbold Noyes and Joseph E. Rice as co-chairmen. In the afternoon Joseph B. Keenan, Assistant Attorney General, will speak and the co-chairman will be Frank Nesbit and William Roy Vallance.

Criminal Justice Association Hears Capt. Milliken and Maj. Brown

Post Staff Photos.

Importance of approaching a solution to crime through care and supervision of juveniles was stressed at yesterday afternoon's forum of the Washington Criminal Justice Association by Capt. Rhoda Milliken, head of the Police Women's Bureau. Maj. Ernest W. Brown, metropolitan Police superintendent, blamed inadequate facilities and curtailed man power for the Capital's crime problem. Shown, left to right—Dr. James A. Nolan, managing director of the association; Capt. Milliken, Ella Werner, of the executive committee; Maj. Brown and John Duggan, forum chairman.

$45,827,322 D. C. Measure Faces Debate in House Today; Collins Expects Bill, Cut $1,517,380, to Pass by Tomorrow is $15,000 to finance a survey of the District's power needs by the Federal Power Commission in an effort "to determine whether or not the operation of a municipally owned power plant in the District of Columbia is economically sound."

Budget.

$60,000 For Plans.

Another is $60,000 to draft plans for a new main library to be built on District owned land on Pennsylvania avenue between John Marshall place and Sixth street northwest. Collins last year introduced a legislative measure to authorize construction of a new main library at an ultimate cost of $2,500,000.

Major projects recommended by the Budget Bureau and approved by the sub-committee were:

Municipal Center, $500,000 to begin constructing the first unit at an ultimate cost of $1,500,000.

New schools and completion of buildings under construction amounting to $1,564,650.

A new wing at the District jail, including a death chamber, at a cost of $125,000.

An underpass along Connecticut avenue at Dupont Circle, to which the sub-committee added an underpass along Massachusetts avenue at Thomas Circle.

Improvements Rejected.

The principal Capital improvements disallowed by the sub-committee were the replacement of the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge, $210,000 for the purchase of a site for a new National Guard Armory, and funds to reopen the Tuperculosis Hospital at Thirteenth and Upshur streets as a convalescent ward of Gallinger Hospital.

Chairman Collins again recommended that all school playgrounds remain under the supervision of the Community Center Department the year around, instead of being operated during the summer by the Playgrounds Department.

That transfer was blocked last year on a point of order raised on the House floor.

The sub-committee again called attention to the need for consolidating all recreational agencies in the District and criticized the lack of progress shown by L. R. Barrett, coordinator of recreational activities. The report recommended the job be eliminated from the appropriation act for 1940.

Manager Suggested.

While allowing on the whole the Budget Bureau estimates for the health department, the Collins subcommittee showed its dissatisfaction with the present administration, particularly of the hospitals, by recommending a job of business manager be created, carrying a salary of $5,600.

Gallinger's estimates were cut, but chiefly because of the refusal of the committee to reopen the Tuberculosis Hospital and the recommended transfer of children from Gallinger to Children's Hospital.

The tuberculosis sanatoria, at Glenn Dale, were allowed the increase recommended by the budget bureau, but the sub-committee noted that "some of the increases allowed by the Budget Bureau seemed to be rather large."

Despite the adverse report of the health officer and the Commissioners, the bill reappropriates an unexpended balance of $165,000 for the purchase of the Homeopathic Hospital to be used as a Northwest health center and convalescent home.

Slashing $425,185 from the Budget Bureau recommendations as to the welfare department, the subcommittee eliminated the National Training School for Girls and the Children's Receiving Home, as forecast in The Post yesterday, and reduced further the administrative expenses of the public assistance division, which had been cut severely by the Budget Bureau.

While allowing the Budget Bureau estimate for emergency relief, the sub-committee recommended the amount of the appropriation allowed for personal services be cut from 10 per cent to 7½ per cent.

Spending Provision.

The bill also carries a provision which prevents the Welfare Department from spending all the appropriation before the end of the fiscal year, and thus incurring a deficiency and a further provision that not more than $75 a month shall be paid to any one family on relief.

The sub-committee cut the old-age pension item by $216,000 but stated that the amount left is "sufficient to meet the requirements as stated by officials of the Board of Welfare."

A slash of $70,000 in the amount appropriated for St. Elizabeths Hospital was made, the report said, on the basis of a recommendation of the Welfare Board.

The cut in the public assistance division estimates followed a severe grilling of Miss Alice M. Hill, director of the division, during hearings on the bill.

The Budget Bureau recommendations carried a reduction in personnel of about two-thirds of the staff to some 50 employes.

By abolishing the Children's Receiving Home, this agency is taken out of the hands of the Welfare Department and the functions are transferred to the Woman's Bureau of the Police Department. It will become a part of the Detention Home, which is operated by the bureau, but will be located in the old police court building following renovation.

The cut in the school estimates parelleled the increase allowed by the Budget Bureau above current appropriations. It eliminated practically all of the 81 new teachers asked by the school officials.

The total appropriation of $12,692,070 is $108,655 less than the appropriation for the current year and $636,006 less than the Budget Bureau estimates.

"The Budget estimates included a number of new teacher positions and supervisory officers," the report said, "while testimony in the hearings before the committee disclosed that the school population is actually less this year than last. The committee, therefore, allowed only those positions intended for new classrooms under construction which will be occupied during the fiscal year 1939."

The only major construction item eliminated was $148,500 for the building of a new Jones elementary school for colored children. The Jones School was to have been razed to make way for the first health center, but with a change in the plan the sub-committee decided to leave the school intact.

Charging inefficiency and waste by janitors and firemen, the subcommittee proposed a reduction of $25,000 for fuel used by the schools.

Appropriations for furnishings were restricted to new buildings that will be occupied during the fiscal year 1939.

Although Chairman Collins had intimated that the Public Utilities Commission might suffer dire consequences for allowing the Capital Transit Co. an increase in token fares, he actually allowed the two accountants recommended by the Budget Bureau.

The only change made in the Budget Bureau recommendations was to insert $7,500 for the now vacant people's counsel office.

Schools, Welfare Groups Bear Brunt of Economy Slashes.

The only District employe who was individually penalized by the sub-committee was Mrs. Josephine Pittman Prescott, director of the Health Department's nursing service, who engaged in an altercation with Chairman Collins during the hearings.

A rider attached to the bill cuts her salary from $3,800 a year to $2,600.

The sub-committee allowed additional employes for the assessor's office and the corporation counsel's office because of the increase in work resulting from last year's tax laws.

A rider in the bill limits all pay increases during the year to $35,000 and makes them subject to approval by the commissioners.

The salary of the District poundmaster, which last year was cut from $3,000 to $2,000, was retained at $2,000 by reinsertion of the rider.

Another important legislative provision makes all land purchases by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, where municipal funds are involved, subject to approval of the District Commissioners.

The cost of making track changes in connection with the building of the Dupont Circle and Thomas Circle underpasses is imposed on the Capital Transit Co. in another rider.

Explaining the elimination of $650,000 for starting a new Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge, the sub-committee said:

"It was the consensus of opinion that other more acute traffic situations should be given priority over the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge."

The bill carries $30,000 for making repairs to the bridge, however.

The committee included $320,000 for the construction of an overpass along K street at Rock Creek parkway. This ultimately may be extended into the K street viaduct reaching to Key Bridge.

An appropriation of $115,000 for the widening of Eleventh street northwest from Massachusetts avenue to Rhode Island avenue was added to the street widening projects recommended by the Budget Bureau.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Caused by Tired Kidneys

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills. Adv

Five Governors Refused Him a Pardon

WAS MOONEY GUILTY?

21 years ago, Tom Mooney was charged with the "Preparedness Day" parade bombing. He was convicted and sentenced to be hanged. President Wilson had his sentence commuted, but since then five governors have refused to pardon him. The Gallup Poll searched out those voters who are familiar with the case and asked them if they thought Tom Mooney was guilty. A special poll was made of California because Mooney thought that persons in California were out to "get him." To know what America thinks of Tom Mooney today, read

Inquiry Bares No Politics in School System

Committee Chairman Recalls Only Rumors of Job Promises.

Is there politics in the District public school system?

There is none if testimony given by Miss Helen E. Samuel, chairman, legislative committee, District Education Association, to Chairman Collins of the House sub-committee on District appropriations.

Miss Samuel had been quoted as making a plea for educators to come from their classrooms to fight efforts of legislators to gain control of the public school system.

"Will you give us names of the Congressmen?" asked Collins, concerning charges of hers that some Congressmen made campaign promises of teaching jobs here.

"I do not know the names of any Congressmen," she replied. "I only told the young man who interviewed me that such rumors had come to my attention."

Can you tell us who told you so?"

"No, sir."

"So, far as you are able to advise the committee now, that is pure talk, is it?

"Rumor. I was told that years ago; I do not recall who made the statement."

Miss Samuel also was questioned about the Congressman who allegedly voted against any measure in the interest of schools because his secretary's daughter was not given a teaching post.

"Will you tell us who that was?" asked Collins.

"You mean the member of Congress?"

"Yes."

"Must I?"

"Yes."

"It was my own Congressman, and I have voted for him twice since I heard that rumor."

STRAIGHT BOURBON WHISKEY

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Man She Loves Resents Rival Beau, and Then Again Advocates Her Having Them; Girl Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Three years ago I met a fine, upright young man. We were great friends and went everywhere together. There was no thought in my head of being serious with him, because all our time was spent having fun with mutual friends. Then suddenly he said he would not see me again, would take the risk of being hurt, unless I devoted myself exclusively to him. Because I liked him better than any other boys I was dating, I decided to give them up and go with him alone.

* * * *

During the ensuing year I learned to love him dearly and we were blissfully happy. We were never actually engaged but often talked of the time when he would be financially able to support a wife, and then we would be married. For me there was no other man during all that time. He was my entire world and I lived for him (and please believe me when I say I am not the "clinging vine" type).

Suddenly, one evening he said I should seek entertainment from other sources, accept other dates, etc. I was stunned and couldn't believe he really meant it, but later realized he did not wish to feel entirely responsible for my happiness. So I began to go around with the old crowd again, accepting invitations to dinner, theater, dances and parties without him. It was boredom, it was torture, for me, but he seemed glad I was letting him out of things. He continued to see me several times a week, however, though we seldom went any place.

* * * *

Finally, after many months, I arrived at a state where I could actually enjoy myself without him.

During my vacation I met a number of new and interesting persons, among them a very fine man. Almost immediately we were attracted to each other. We did not see each other over a period of several months but he telephoned frequently and wanted to come to see me. I put him off until finally he invited me to his city for a special dancing party. I went and met his friends, who are quite the most charming persons I have ever known. The following week-end he came here to see me, and naturally I had to tell the other man I could not see him.

* * * *

Now, the latter demands that I give up these newly made friends and all the things I have learned to enjoy without him. I do not wish to lose him and yet, should I allow him to dictate to me a second time? Especially when there is not a chance of immediate marriage for us? I believe I still love him, and I also enjoy meeting new persons and going places with them. Would it be better to tell him I do not wish to go steadily with him or be serious again until we can be married? Sincerely. M. F. S.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR M. F. S.: In my opinion, this "fine, upright man" you met three years ago is cautious, shallow, vain and cruelly selfish; more in love with his power over you than he is in love with you as a person; and probably incapable of loving anyone half as much as he loves himself. He is playing a cat-and-mouse game with you; he is being, to change metaphors, an out-and-out "dog in the manger." He doesn't give a rap how much you suffer or in what way so long as his vanity and self-love are served at no cost to himself. He isn't willing to asume full responsibility for your happiness; he doesn't want to be leaned on, depended upon or counted on by you (he has made that very clearly); but, on the other hand, he is perfectly willing to keep you on leash, to deprive you of fair opportunity to find with someone else that which you seek and which he denies you, in order to keep you on call, as it were, to supply his variable, egoistic needs.

* * * *

Vanity, not love; jealousy, not devotion, was responsible for his demand, in both the first and second instances, that you give up all other companionships for his. A cruel sort of complacency (which made him sure that you were so completely in thrall to him that he could easily afford to turn you out on your own again) and a streak of evasive moral cowardice a yard wide, was responsible for his suggestion—after a year—that you seek entertainment from other sources." Actually, he doesn't want you; but his vanity and egotism demand that you shall not recover from the spell he has cast over you. Once he had made utterly sure you were his emotional slave for life, he would have scant use for you, if any.

* * * *

My advice to you is to hold fast to that saving margin of emotional independence of him you have mustered over a period of a year or more; to cultivate the friendship of the "fine man" you met on vacation, as well as any other attractive men you may contrive to meet in future; to refuse to relinquish any friends, or any opportunities for friendship at the behest of this petty dictator; and to refuse, in addition, to let him take up too many evenings of your time just sitting at home. In other words, confront him with the necessity of competing, as any reasonable-minded man is willing to do, for the society of an attractive woman. Don't let him suppose—indeed, don't let it be true—that he can automatically establish full proprietary rights to your company merely by issuing one of his "or else——" ultimatums. When he says "or else——" let it be the "else" that he gets, not a meekly biddable slave. If you pursue this course, you will probably evoke a downright proposal of marriage from him rather shortly. And if you accept, let it be on your own head. I can't promise any satisfying measure of worth-while happiness to the generous, sensitive, emotionally honest and ardent woman who marries such a man.

Color of Frock Trim Is Picked Up for Hat

Paris (U.P.).—For afternoon, often the color of the frock or its trim is picked up to make a bright felt hat that rises in any direction that proves becoming. Braid trim may be repeated on a hat, sequins often make the top of a flat crown, ribbons follow the dress trim or cutouts of the dress fabric are appliqued onto the edge of a long veil.

Sports hats worn with tweed and dark wool suits follow the bright tones of blouses, the crowns taking a high, tapering line. Berets are adapted for all occasions—there are high, stovepipe crowns and fan-shaped brims rise from the front or back of turban-shaped hats.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

How Human Eye Works.

With color photography and colored movies increasing in effectiveness all the time, all those who have color vision should be grateful. The color blind person will get along just as well at the colored movies as he does in the world about him, although reds and greens will all appear to be rather gray to him.

Color vision is a wonderfully complicated part of our physiology. According to one scientist the human eye can see 100,000,000 different colors. In the back of the retina there are two kinds of cells—one called the "rods" which see only black and white and not color, the other the cones, which see color, and these are in the center of the retina only.

You do not see colors in a dim light because the pupil of your eye dilates and allows what light there is to be diffused all over the retina. In bright sunlight, however, you see colors because the pupil focuses the light, usually on the central part of the retina, where the cones are located.

Few human beings are totally color blind, although it is said that certain animals, such as cats and owls, live in a world of gray and somber hues. About eight out of every hundred men are partially color blind. Their eyes are sensitive to white, black, yellow and blue only. Women are almost never color blind, nor are Negroes or Indians.

Colors work hard for us all the time. Red flags, exit signs and poison labels guard against bodily harm. Colors on postage stamps enable them to be identified quickly. The blue suit of the policeman, the green mail box, and the red fire plug are known to everyone. Playing cards, billiard balls, filing systems and maps, all depend on color to help rapid identification.

Colors are said to have various emotional appeals. Red is symbolic of your heart; blue and green suggest nature, the sky and water and have a clear, cool association and stimulate associations with the sense of touch; purple is symbolic of flowers and appeals to the sense of smell; orange is symbolic of fruits and flavors and appeals to the sense of taste; yellow is symbolic of song and is associated with the sense of hearing.

So say the psychologists. I turn it over to you as to whether it is true or not.

Lace Gowns for All Occasions Loom on Spring Style Scene

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

LACE, the perennial fashion favorite, is appearing in new guises for Southern resort wear and spring. In a reeent survey it was found that nearly every man succumbs to the charm of a lace gown—a word to the wise in search of romance! Aside from this, since lace has become all-year fabric and is so versatile, it may be worn for formal or spectator sports (depending upon the styling), it is being looked upon as a practical material. Time was when the only choice in lace was either black or white and the material was considered very fragile and hence an expensive purchase. Now, with all colors of the rainbow (and many more) available and almost as many different textures, lace is as staple and dependable a fabric as any of the silks or cottons.

French designers, including such notables as Paquin, Lelong, Chanel, Ardanse and Balenciaga, are sponsoring lace as an important spring costume medium for day and evening wear. It is interesting to note that the stylings range from ultra-sophistication in colors which harmonize with the lines to unsophisticated styles in pastel tints. American designers are also using lace in their new collections, with emphasis on the spectator sports type of costume and informal evening gowns for cruise and resort wear. Cotton laces are much in evidence in the pre-spring showings—in white, natural and soft color tones—styled on simple lines of one and two-piece interpretations.

Aside from the wearing qualities, lace is highly practical from another angle; it packs beautifully and does not wrinkle, which makes it ideal for traveling. Lace, whether fragile or of the sturdier textures, adapts itself well as a background for numerous types of accessories; for evening, complemented by glittering rich-looking accents, and for daytime, dramatized by a contrasting texture, such as suede, massive jewelry and the like. Lace is also being used as an accessory for mid-season—lace boleros, lingerie touches on dark frocks, neckwear trimmings.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Jan. 26.

THE COMMON and simpler matter of a few of the girls getting together of an afternoon for a quiet little card game on the dining-room table has suddenly been turned into a burning issue—all because a police gentleman (or was he?) stepped into the home of Mrs. Sadie Borer and arrested her on the charge of gambling! Mrs. Borer says he didn't even knock!

ALICE HUGHES.

Brought before Judge Solomon on this heinous charge, the puzzled Mrs. Borer took a heavy verbal lambasting from the stern jurist. This is a sample: "Women who waste their time and substance gambling while their husbands are working hard to keep up the household are a disgrace!" This castigation puzzled both the defendant and her loyal husband still more. Her spouse Benjamin said, "What if she does lose a dollar or two? Isn't it better than sitting all afternoon in the movies? She and her friends were just playing a sociable game!"

In spite of this pleasant accord, Mrs. Borer, who is a young grandmother, was held under bail for the scrutiny of a higher court. Now the plump defendant is pretty mad about it all.

These friendly afternoon card games probably go on all over our fair and free Nation. Mrs. Borer and her girl friends take turns in entertaining. The other day she drew the long straw, so she had eight of the ladies to luncheon, including a relative or two. After the table was cleared, they sat down to a modest game of five-card stud poker. Then the law appeared, and now history is being made in a small way. Is no friendly stud game safe from the gendarmerie?

Obviously, such a police move could only come from an informer's cruel hand. "Maybe it was a 'lady' who wasn't invited!" hints Mrs. Borer. At any rate the freedom of our housewives' afternoons is threatened. To the barricades!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The swing music madness hit its noisy peak when Benny Goodman "swang it out" before 3,000 people at Carnegie Hall a few nights ago, on the first stop of a national concert tour. This weird mass of rhythms gone crazy actually had the throng cheering and stomping in that dignified setting—not even the sainted Toscanini himself, conducting Beethoven's Ninth, could stir up the citizens to a finer frenzy.

It was all wonderful and insane. I don't profess to understand these puzzling matters—I'm part of the Lost Generation, I suppose. But I did hear that so super-super was the ticket demand that Maestro Goodman himself had to pay $8 for a seat for his dear old mother.

* * * *

Is this a lesson for wives, or not? Our Mrs. Sophia Serby has just had her husband Frank tooled into court, charging that he whipped her because she wouldn't give him a wifely kiss. To quote Cyrano, "A kiss, when all is said and done, what is it?" Certainly, I should hazard, nothing to risk a thumping over—or am I too casual?

* * * *

We're losing little Gloria Caruso, daughter of the late great tenor and herself a singing student at 18, to Italy because her Italian income can't be taken out of that country. Her mother, the former Dorothy Benjamin, local society girl, already lives near Florence. Gloria's resemblance to her famous father is really astonishing. Wonder if she has some of the same magic in her throat. Wouldn't it be wonderful if she had?

* * * *

This is the time of year when our girls suffer from a widespread and very annoying epidemic—chapped lips. Naturally, with the icy winds drying the lips, the impulse is to lick them—which increases the virulence of the disease. This we must avoid at all costs. Too dry a lipstick is another danger, and a certain beautician has just added a new ingredient which not only keeps them moist, but is also healing. Ho hum—just another of our little girlish troubles!

Star Designs Jewelry.

Bettie Davis, movie actress, scores in the creation of jewelry. A bracelet three inches wide with clips to match was one of her inventions and recently she had her jeweler make high heels of catalin for her. These will be put on specially made evening sandals and will be shrinking because of the way this crystal-like composition catches the lights.

Wash New Linens, Even When 'Clean'

Tempting though it is to put brand-new linens right into circulation, control that impulse until they have been washed. It's surprising how much soil can sift into the apparently spotless recesses of a new tablecloth or towel.

Though the pieces may have been clean when they left the factory, they are bound to be affected by dusty air and the fingering of sales clerks and prospective purchasers. Even though they look fairly fresh, they are practically "used" and unfit for the table or for contact with your skin until washed. When you put them in the wash tub you will realize how soiled they are. Often two or three extra heavy suds baths are needed to wash new linens clean and to offset the presence of fillers.

This warning does not apply to articles that are sealed in containers which bear the manufacturer's assurance that their contents were laundered before they were wrapped.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

THE COURSE you choose at the beginning of your slimming program determines the outcome. Reducers soon begin to look like their diets and you can wind up as a quitter, a neurotic or a glamour girl.

The way of the quitter is usually via the freak diet. You start out like a Spartan with black coffee for breakfast, bouillon and a lettuce leaf for lunch, and a lamb chop, sliced tomatoes and more black coffee for dinner. This goes on for all of three days, or until it begins to tell on you. In that short time you may lose as much as five pounds, and you can count on gaining them back with interest the very next week. Although you never get any slimmer on this plan, it is likely to be your favorite and you may try it two or three times a year.

The neurotic is just the opposite. If you belong to this group you make a fetish of diet and will go to any lengths to get slim. Your method is simple, direct and dangerous. You eat a little less of everything, particularly the foods which should never, under any circumstances, be decreased in the menus. The danger of this plan lies in the fact that it is usually continued over a long period of time. You are so determined to get slim you stick with your diet until your food habits are permanently distorted. The final results are malnutrition and nerves. Even though you are thin, you are not very happy about it.

Still another misguided reducer is the one who follows a balanced low-calorie menu, but will not exercise. She fares better, however, than either the quitter or the neurotic. All that happens to her is that she loses in the wrong places. To be controlled, weight loss must be directed. Without exercise, the tendency always is to lose weight from the face and throat rather than the hipline.

The reducer who adopts a 1,000-to-1,400-calorie balanced menu and who exercises regularly 15 minutes a day is the only one with a chance of winding up as a glamour girl. The balanced menu contains normal amounts of lean meat, skim milk, eggs, fruits, nuts and vegetables to supply the essential protein, minerals and vitamins. These food elements are not only essential to well-being but they are also the foundation of beauty. For this reason, the scientific diet is fast becoming popular. Also, the exercise program which forms part of this plan results in lovelier proportions and promotes beauty of a radiant type. Every one of you can achieve normal weight and a beautiful figure if you will choose the right course at the beginning.

Glass Garden for Indoors

Thanks to the lavish way plants grow in a terrarium, you can have such a garden quickly—colorful with blue African violets, graceful with tropical palms and ferns like the terrarium in the picture.

What's the magic secret of a terrarium? Its glass walls and top protect the little seedlings and cuttings from drafts. The air is always evenly warm and moist. What excuse is there for a plant not to do its best?

If you decide to landscape your terrarium you can have grand fun with miniature firs and velvety mosses. Or you can be exotic with cacti. Or—and this shows you can take a dare—why not raise orchids? Lots of people do—in little window-sill terrariums—and have good luck with them.

To make your new glass garden, take an old fish bowl or almost any other kind of glass container. Fill the bottom with pebbles, cover with fibre or garden loam, tuck in your plants, put on a glass top—and watch the miracle unfold.

A handsome companion for your terrarium is a flower stand with a rosily blooming begonia and a graceful fern. Neither needs much sunlight. To be different—try the fascinating staghorn fern in the picture.

In our 40-page booklet, "Success With House Plants and Flowers," are complete directions for making terrariums, dish gardens. Pointers on bulbs, vines, ferns, flowering plants help you to have flowers, handsome foliage plants all year.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Success With House Plants and Flowers," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

FUNCTIONAL needlework, we call it, in our best modern mood. It has little to do with pretty guest towels and do-funnies that a lady in the past whipped up in her idle moments. These days we are having great fun and a sense of real achievement in creating down-to-earth basic necessities for our home—the while fulfilling our desire to knit, crochet and sew a fine seam.

Lucy N. has made all the upholstery coverings for her dining room chairs. Her furniture was "picked up," a round pedestal table and six so-so chairs with upholstered seats and backs. Using unbleached muslin, she first made patterns of the pieces needed to upholster the seats and backs. This material, cut exactly to the muslin patterns, was created in solid off-white tufts of wool clipped for a deep, luxurious effect. When each piece was finished, the muslin pattern was tacked on the chair and reinforced at the edges with strong tape on which were sewn those heavy snaps used by professional upholsterers. Then the white tufted coverings for each chair were shaped into place on the muslin, allowing them to be taken off for cleaning when necessary. The room itself is lovely, with pale blue walls, off-color Shantung draperies at the windows and a deep blue rug on the floor. The off-color upholstery on the chairs adds a modern touch that is smart and different.

And Ellen R. is very proud of a beautiful afghan she has completed—mulberry background, with each strip embroidered in gay wools in a floral pattern. Instead of throwing this lovely piece willy-nilly on a bed or sofa, this smart lady has stretched it over the back of a sofa to form a definite part of the upholstery, the remainder of the coach being covered in a mulberry fabric to match the afghan. The effect is stunning in her colonial living room.

Another use for add-moment work has been found by Nell K., who loves to tat. Soft white voile curtains in a colonial guest room have white tatting as an edging, and the bedspread of the same material as the curtains also boast yards and yards of this attractive edging.

Send a 3-cent stamp for our bulletin, "Sew Yourself a Family History," which includes patterns you can copy in making individual needleswork.

Plenty to Do Guards Child From Tantrums

Training Should Be Pleasant, Vanderbilt Nurse Expert Says.

Little Rock, Ark. (A.P.).—If your child has temper tantrums, give him more to do.

That's the advice of Miss Cora Lou McCaskill, instructor in the Vanderbilt University School of Nursing at Nashville, Tenn. She attributes most pre-school age unhappiness to "unemployment."

"Temper tantrums in children can be prevented by creating a positive environment with a maximum of do's and a minimum of don'ts," she says.

"In attempting to correct this behavior do not show displeasure. Either ignore the child or isolate him in a quiet room. When he is over the tantrum he will come out if given the opportunity to do so."

Prerequisites of habit training of the young child are to know what is wanted and how it is to be accomplished, she says.

"Make the training pleasant and give the child time," she adds.

Miss McCaskill advises permitting the child to dress himself by the time he is 4 years old, except for putting on his shoes.

Emily Post might not approve, but Miss McCaskill counsels "don't be alarmed" if the child is prone to spill things at the table.

"The child is going to do some spilling," she said. "Let him do it. The child and floor are both subject to water. Such procedure helps the child develop independence. Eating habits should begin at birth.

"If a child plays with his food remind him of it the first two or three times. After 30 minutes, if he makes no attempt to correct this behavior, the food should be taken from him," she asserts.

Pajamas Bobbed At Knees, Elbows Offered for Men

Chicago, (A.P.).—Stylists have recommended that clothiers sell men's pajamas short—short, that is, in the legs and sleeves.

If indications at annual convention of the National Association of Retail Clothiers and Furnishers mean anything, a man won't know whether he's dressing for bed or getting up for a tennis game. But the men who fashion clothes say he'll like it.

Knee-length and short-sleeved pajamas, convention observers said, eliminate a lot of binding and "crawling" in night wear.

While the clothiers are going short on pajamas, they report a longer trend for wear earlier in the evening, with tuxedos slipping to semiformal rating and "tails" gaining in popularity.

Valentines for '38 Tender but Direct

Dan Cupid's age-old story of romantic attachment will be told in a very modern accent on St. Valentine's Day this year. While the 1938 valentines show no lessening of ardor or loss of sentiment, they speak a language of love that seems more simple and forthright than heretofore. The current idiom of love is as tender and warm with feeling as ever, though strictly attuned to the sophisticated emotional attitude of modern youth.

This new modernity is reflected in the design and color of the 1938 valentines as well as in the verse. Much of the fussy detail of the old valentine has disappeared, and you will see unexpected bright metallic touches, such as a diagonal striping of scalloped silver across a rose colored card, or a heart overlaid with fine squares of gleaming silver mesh. The modern manner is also evident in unconventional flower groupings and in clever use of the subtle new pastels and "dusky" shades.

Tea Given At Spanish Embassy

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

One of the most studious of "diplomatic daughters," Senorita Laura de los Rios, yesterday proved herself also one of Washington's most gracious hostesses. The occasion was a small tea given at the Spanish Embassy—a party those fortunate enough to attend always will remember with keenest pleasure.

As everyone knows, the daughtre of the Spanish Ambassador and Senora de los Rios is studying at Columbia Univer[illegible] this year, working toward h[illegible] tor's degree. But now, between semesters, she is visiting her parents, and by way of making the brief holiday complete, she set aside yesterday afternoon as the time to see a number of her friends.

Wearing a trim black frock with a brightly printed Eton jacket, Senorita de los Rio, was a pretty picture, moving serenely from one knot of guests to another . . . chatting now with one group in the handsomely furnished drawing room . . . now escorting others to the dining room . . . returning to greet newcomers . . . and making every guest glad he had braved the chill of the wintry day to get to the party.

Tea Table Is the Prettiest of Season

The long table in the dining room was a decorator's dream—the prettiest tea table I have seen this year. Three big silver bowls, filled with mixed flowers—carnations, roses, lilies—were flanked by clusters of pink candles in tall candelabra. An unusual decorative note was introduced in the use of 12 big pineapples and a number of palm sprays to complete the decorative plan. Tea, coffee, tomato and cucumber sandwiches and every other dainty you can imagine had a place on that table and on the smaller one at the end of the room, where sherry and cocktails also were served.

Among those assisting were Senora de Quintanilla, wife of the Counselor of the Mexican Embassy, who wore a smart black frock trimmed in white and a snappy black straw sailor perched prettily on her head and set off with a tiny veil; Senora de Pittaluga, wife of the Second Secretary of the Spanish Embassy, who wore a dress of moss green crepe, trimmed in gold that blended nicely with her honey colored hair; Mme. Constantine Oumansky, wife of the Counselor of the Soviet Embassy, whose dress of pencil blue was worn with a black hat, and Senorita Lutecia Quintanilla, whose black ensemble was most becoming. Another who did more than her part toward making the party a success was Senorita Marina Cuevas, who mingled among the guests, effecting introductions and answering questions as to who was who during most of the party.

Several Debutantes Glimpsed Among Guests

Most of the guests were drawn from the younger sets in Washington, with a sprinkling of out-of-towners. Glimpsed in the company, that for the most part came early and stayed late, were Miss Frances Andrews, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Adolphus Andrews. She wore a rust-colored frock and a brown felt hat. Miss Anne Mahoney, daughter of the Secretary of the Canadian Legation, was in a semitailored blue frock, while Miss Caroline Cecil, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Joseph Cecil, was stunning in an all-black ensemble.

Miss Yoeh E. Wang, daughter of the Chinese Ambassador, was there; also, the Minister Counselor of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Baron; the First Secretary of the Mexican Embassy and Senora de Fuentes; Miss Willa Magee, the Counselor of the Soviet Embassy, Constantine Oumansky; the Second Secretary of the Spanish Embassy, Gustavo Pittaluga.

Also, the Attache of the Dominican Legation, Sebastian E. Valverde, and Senorita Mercedes Alfonseca, niece of the Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoriza. Pretty Erma Castillo Najera, daughter of the Mexican Ambassador, was an especially popular guest. She arrived with Senorita Lupe Davila.

Among others there were the First Secretary of the Ecuadorean Legation and Senora de Crespo, Resid Anamur, First Secretary of the Turkish Embassy, Paul Diez de Medina, of the Bolivian Legation, and many others.

While the party went merrily along in one part of the embassy, the Spanish Ambassador was occupied with weightier matters in his private office. He was listening to short-wave radio reports from the Spanish war front.

Mrs. Harry H. Woodring Luncheon Honor Guest

Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, wife of the Secretary of War, was the honor guest at a luncheon given yesterday by Miss Dorothy Tirrell at her home on Wyoming avenue.

Among those present was also Miss Yoeh E. Wang, daughter of the Chinese Ambassador.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Espey on Tuesday evening, marked their fiftieth wedding anniversary with a reception at their home, 2010 First street. About 150 persons were present.

Will Be Honor Guest at Tea Today

Harris & Ewing.

ONE of Washington's tea parties today will be in honor of Mrs. Wilfred T. Mann, daughter of the Minister of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close, with the affair taking place in the white-stoned Legation on Massachusetts avenue. Mrs. Mann arrived recently from her home in England to visit her parents here.

Vinton Chapin Is Bridegroom

Of interest to the diplomatic service here is the announcement of the marriage of Vinton Chapin, secretary of the American Legation at Prague, Czechoslovakia, to Miss Lillian Aldrich Winchester. The ceremony took place Tuesday in New York City, and was attended only by members of the family and a few friends.

Miss Winchester is the daughter of Mrs. Charles F. Aldrich, of Boston and Dublin, N. H., while Mr. Chapin is the son of the late Amory and Marie Dickinson Chapin, of Boston. He is a graduate of Harvard.

Mr. and Mrs. Chapin will sail soon from New York on the Aquitania for Prague, where they will make their home.

Mrs. Stoddard Gives Musicale

Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard entertained at her home yesterday afternoon a group of friends who about a year ago decided they should meet every other week in a sort of informal "workshop of the arts" and share ideas about the various projects in which they were interested. Not all such groups survive the first enthusiasms of getting together, but this one did.

Yesterday Miss Minna Niemann, a pianist who is well known in Washington, played for the group. musical circles of Baltimore and tea was served afterward.

C. C. Van Leers Honor Daughter, Fiance Tomorrow

Capt. and Mrs. Carlos Clark Van Leer will entertain at dinner tomorrow evening at the Shoreham in honor of their daughter, Miss Leila Van Leer, and H. Donald Schwaab, whose wedding will take place in St. Margaret's Church Saturday evening.

Guests will include members of the bridal party and immediate families of the prospective bride and bridegroom.

Capt. and Mrs. Van Leer will also give a breakfast at noon Saturday at the Columbia Country Club for members of the bridal party. A reception at the Mayflower will follow the wedding.

McClays Give Supper To Mark Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. McClay, of Wilmington, Del., who are visiting in Washington, gave a small supper party in the Metronome Room of the Wardman Park Hotel last evening to celebrate Mr. McClay's birthday.

Their guests were Miss Charlotte Reichel, Miss Frances Fine, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Bellman, Carl Hey and Patrick O'Malley.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Petzold celebrated their fifty-fifth wedding anniversary yesterday. Both are natives of Baltimore but have lived in Washington for 35 years. They have two sons, Robert M. Petzold, of this city, and George K. Petzold, of Chicago.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon.

THIS IS THE TIME OF YEAR when everybody either is making lists of "ten bests" of something or other or selecting people like "Miss Texas" or "Queen of the Grapefruit Festival." This column proposes to evaluate a few of the current debutantes—lack of space prevents mentioning all—and herewith presents the impressions those who "came out" this year have created among a number of onlookers.

The most striking of the debutantes are perhaps the Meem sisters, probably because there are two of them. The Misses Ann Carroll and Eleanor Eastbourne Meem are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Meem and, although not twins, they look and dress alike. Incidentally, they are very impressive sartorially, and perhaps might be awarded the grand prize from a Rue de la Paix point of view.

Most dramatic looking of the current crop of debs is Miss Marian Kirk, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Alan Kirk. Slender and tall, she is a striking blonde with honey-colered hair, a creamy complexion and large blue eyes. Miss Kirk is missing from many of the parties this winter only because she is a student at Bryn Mawr.

Everbody agrees that the most athletic of the debs is Miss Mary Wilson, who rides, even on these cold winter days, loves to walk, play tennis, skates and bowls.

• • • •

MOST DEBUTANTES like to think themselves sophisticated, but the prize for this particular attribute goes to Miss Caroline Cecil, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Joseph Cecil. Tall, with the approved thinness of the current glamour girl, and with a long bob, Miss Cecil is hardly ever surprised by anything.

Most natural of the debs are Miss Jane Acheson, daughter of the Dean Achesons; Miss Barbara Bradley, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bradley; Miss Mary Alice Sturdevant, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. E. W. Sturdevant, and Miss Patricia Griffin. The ability to be completely themselves is something many debutantes do not possess, laboring as they do under the strain of feeling they have to make an impression.

• • • •

THE PRIZE for pulchritude might be divided between Miss Austeine McDonald, of Warrenton, and Miss Anne Mahoney, daughter of Merchant Mahoney, of the Canadian Legation. The former is a brunette, with curly hair and a heart-shaped face, and the latter is a blonde with large blue eyes.

Remember camp days when the best all-around girl was chosen amid great fanfare at the big banquet the last night? She was the one generally considered having the widest variety of interests. For this we nominate Miss Alice Barry, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. David Barry, who is good looking, athletic and chic, and not only likes to sing and dance, but does both well.

• • • •

EFFICIENCY is not considered a very glamorous quality, but it comes in handy when a debutante has to do charity work—as every one must to be a success. Miss Alex Rowan, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Stephen Rowan, must have this quality besides other attributes, for she was chosen to do the hard work of getting advertising for the program at the forthcoming Thrift Shop Frolics.

Most musical of those who made their bow to society this year is Louise Burke, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John Burke. She plays the piano and practices as regularly as could be expected of a debutante.

Mrs. J. L. Loose Is Dinner Hostess At the Shoreham

The Swiss Minister and Mme. Marc Peter, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace and the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper were ranking guests at a dinner given last evening by Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose in her apartment at the Shoreham.

The Italian Ambassador and Donna Matilde de Suvich and the Ambassador of Germany and Frau Dieckhoff were the ranking guests at Mrs. Loose's dinner on Monday night.

Mrs. Loose has as her guest at the Shoreham her nephew, W. Scott Bates, of Kansas City, Mo.

• • • •

Mrs. William Mann Irvine, whose Chevy Chase home has been leased for the season, is staying at the Mayflower, and will be there through February.

• • • •

O'Connor Will Give Buffet for the Press

J. F. T. O'Connor, the Comptroller of the Currency, whose resigation becomes effective in April, will be host at his annual buffet supper for Washington press correspondents at 7:30 o'clock this evening at the Shoreham.

Mr. O'Connor plans to be a candidate for the Governorship of California, and expects to spend a good deal of his time in that State after leaving here.

Luncheon Canceled.

Mr. and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot have conceled the luncheon they had planned for Saturday because of the death of their niece, Mrs. Rosamond Pinchot Gaston, and have gone to New York.

Many From D.C. To Attend 'Night In Poland' Ball

A loaf of bread, a jug of wine and a little sweet music under the bough of the Waldorf-Astoria in New York City generally make for a glittering event, but tomorrow evening it will be downright dazzling when the Park Avenue caravansary becomes the scene of the "Night in Poland" ball and pageant which is being sponsored by the Kosciuszko Foundation.

Although hundreds of persons are expected to arrive in New York especially for the occasion from other cities throughout the East, the affair has a 90-degree Washington angle. Count Jerzy Potocki, the Polish Ambassador, who is honorary chairman of the ball, will have a box for the occasion with Miss Perkins, Secretary of Labor, as one of his guests. Miss Perkins is another of the distinguished patronesses of the affair.

Davila to Be Guest Of Count Potocki

Others who will be guests of the Polish Ambassador include Charles Davila, the former Rumanian Minister, who will sail for his homeland soon; the Polish Consul General of New York and Mme. Gruszka, and Prof. Prince of Columbia University and Mrs. Prince.

Senorita Laura de los Rios, daughter of the Spanish Ambassador, is serving on the junior committee for the affair.

Mrs. William A. Becker, president general of the D. A. R.; Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, wife of Representative Bacon; Mrs. Vernon Kellogg and Gen. James G. Harbord, also appear on the long list of patrons and patronesses.

Miss Penfield To Be in Pageant

Miss Virginia Penfield, granddaughter of Mrs. Mark Conrad who makes her home at the Shoreham, is one of the Gotham debutantes who will take part in the elaborate pageant. M. S. Szymczak, governor of the Federal Reserve Board, is a member of the board of trustees of the Kosciuszko Foundation. Arms Urged As Defense, Relief Need National Defense Body Has Annual Dinner at Mayflower.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Armament, both for national defense and economic recovery, was advocated yesterday at sessions of the Thirteenth Women's Conference on National Defense, at the Mayflower Hotel. Raymond Leslie Buell, president of the Foreign Policy Association, advocated an international embargo of Japan, a strong military establishment for the United States and an agreement among the democracies not to recognize any "puppet" government set up by Japan in China.

James Harvey Rogers, professor of political economy at Yale, speaking in the afternoon, offered a big armament program as "a public works program par excellence" which would "do more than anything else to dispel the present situation and restore the dominating influence in world affairs to the economically important and peace-loving countries."

Mr. Buell urged a "united front" of the United States with "other like-minded powers."

He praised Secretary Hull's trade agreements program, saying: "If his plan succeeds, we will make a group of trade agreements with those countries which still believe in free enterprise, and establish an economic bloc which should bring economic recovery to the greater part of the world. We will invite the dictatorships, Germany, Italy and Japan, to join this bloc, on condition that a political settlement with the powers can be made."

Rogers Outlines Four-Point Program

Mr. Rogers, prefacing his recommendations with an explanation of the way in which political dictatorship follows in the shadow of governmental control over economic life, outlined four concrete policies: First, to restore the incentive of business to expand in order to take over the big load of spending recently dropped by the Government; second, to give investors a greater incentive to buy and to hold securities; third, to remove all unnecessary expensive and time-consuming restrictions on the flotation of securities, and fourth, to resort again to Government spending.

In line with his final recommendation, he urged that the United States "enter immediately upon a vigorous and speedy rearmament program, including the building of additional facilities for airplanes and ships."

In the prosecution of a big armament program, he said, the greatest purchases would be made from the heavy industries now suffering in the current slump and the resulting output would have the additional advantage of not competing with that of any private business.

Senator Reynolds Urges Finger Prints

Senator Robert R. Reynolds, of North Carolina, who was on the banquet program last night, urged women of organizations participating in the conference to inaugurate a fingerprint campaign to obtain registration of fingerprints of all the citizens of the United States as well as aliens. He suggested the plan as a constructive step toward protecting the country from within. Thousands of aliens come to the United States every year, he pointed out, and fingerprint records will make it possible to keep track of them and determine whether they are remaining legally or illegally. Similar registration of citizens is valuable for identification in case of emergency, he added.

Senator Reynolds stood with the other speakers for an adequate national defense, but asserted there should be legislation to take the profit out of war, through mobilization of industry and resources as well as men, and through taxation which would equalize the burden which falls on those who sacrifice lives and property. He likewise advocated Government control of munition sale and manufacture.

Miss Dennis Heads Dinner Committee

Miss Faustine Dennis, past national president of the Women's Overseas Service League, was chairman of the banquet last night, at which nearly 1,000 guests were present. Music for the dinner was by the United States Marine Band, and also included solos by Miss Hollace Shaw, of California. Mrs. Gladys Mooney, conference chairman, presided.

At the table with Mrs. Mooney and Miss Dennis were Senator Raynolds, Mr. Buell, Mrs. Malcolm Douglas, president of the American Legion Auxiliary; Mrs. Laurie Schertle, president of the Auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars; Mrs. Irving Fairweather, president of the American War Mothers; Mrs. O. D. Oliphant, honorary president of the conference; Scott P. Squyres, commander in chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars; Dr. Overton S. Mennet, commander in chief of the Grand Army; Mrs. J. C. Mellichamp, president of the Service Star Legion; Mrs. Elizabeth Kothe, president of the Woman's Relief Corps; Mrs. Carroll McGuire, treasurer of the conference; Mrs. Horace B. Blake, president of the American Gold Star Mothers; the Rev. Arlington A. McCallam; Mrs. Mary M. Manning, president of Daughters of Union Veterans, secretary of the conference; Mrs. O. W. Hahn, past president of the American Legion Auxiliary; Miss Charlotte Aycrigg, president general of the Daughters of the Revolution, and other members of the advisory board, Mme. Cantacuzene, Mrs. Dolly Secord and Mrs. Mary A. McGauley.

Mrs. Hurja Launches Series Of Teas by Peaceways Group

Rep. Caroline O'Day Urges Standard of Ethics to Make Mass Killings in War as Wrong as Individual Murder.

Mrs. Emil Hurja was hostess yesterday at her home at the first of a series of monthly teas planned by the Washington World Peaceways group, whose purpose it is to create sentiment for peace by impressing on the public the horrors of war. Invitations for the affair were issued through Mrs. Louise Lazelle, Washington representative of the organization, and guests included leading members of other peace groups.

Representative Caroline O'Day, at whose home the first Washington meeting of World Peaceways was held last summer, spoke, urging that "we bring our country and others to a standard of ethics which will result in a realization that mass murder in war is as wrong and illegal as individual murder. In the middle ages countries were decimated by war and plagues. With the aid of science, we have reduced plagues, but we have done little about war," she said.

Representative O'Day declared she could go all the way with the Administration in its policies except that she was opposed to large appropriations for armament.

Max Weiss, from headquarters of World Peaceways in New York, and Miss Estelle Sternberger, national secretary, were guests at the tea. Mr. Weiss spoke in place of Miss Sternberger, who was suffering from a dental operation. He explained the background of World Peaceways which was following the admonition of Representative Bruce Barton in an article on war some years ago to "Advertise that hell." Through pictures, articles and the radio, this has been done, said Mr. Weiss. He added that World Peaceways was endeavoring to break down the timidity about discussing war and peace and endeavoring to make people "peace conscious on an intelligent basis." Representative Barton was not able to attend the tea.

Among those who assisted the hostess at the tea table were Mrs. John Carter Vincent, Mrs. David Cushman Coyle, Mrs. John Grigsby, Mrs. Preston McGoodwin, Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, Mrs. John Brisben Walker and Mrs. Eugene Legett.

Among the many other guests present were Miss Doris Stevens, chairman of the Inter-American Commission of Women; Miss Mabel Vernon, director of the People's Mandate Committee; Mrs. Thomas Burke, a member of the Flying Caravan of the Mandate Committee; Mr. Burke; Miss Earlene White, president of the Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs; Mrs. Homer Bone, Mrs. Lewis B. Schwellenbach, Mrs. Guy Gillette, Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo, Mrs. Fred Biermann, Mrs. J. J. Dempsey, Mrs. Edward C. Eicher, Mrs. Harold B. Cooley, Mrs. Ernest H. Daniel, Mrs. Maxwell Hamilton and Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie.

Symposium Conducted On Better Public Speech

A symposium devoted to better speech was conducted last evening at the Institute of Social Arts, 2017 S street northwest, with Alice Keith participating.

Mrs. Greathouse contended that the chief difficulties which confront both men and women in extemperaneous speaking are fear, bad habits of breathing, personal mannerisms and lack of a well thought out outline.

Mrs. Pinto told the audience of many amusing incidents when club women as well as uneducated people had made unintentional errors in pronunciation and grammar. Mary Mason, director of the WRC Home Forum Hour, gave the audience an inside picture of what goes on before the microphone; Hester Walker Bell, who conducts a voice clinic at the institute, gave some pointers on the use of the voice, and at the close of the period, Miss Keith, director of the institute and instructor in radio technique, played records of voices caught unawares, which illustrated points made by the previous speakers.

Soroptimist Club Addressed by Poet

Robert H. Davidson, a poet whose technique was described as "a combination of James Whitcomb Riley and Will Rogers," was guest of honor and speaker yesterday at the luncheon of the Soroptimist Club in the Willard Hotel. Mrs. Agnes Newman presided.

After a brief talk on poetry and poets, Mr. Davidson entertained the club with some of his verses. Miss Kathleen Kearney, formerly of Charleston, S. C., who now is a resident of Washington, sang a group of songs, accompanied by Mrs. Jewell Downs, a club member.

Mrs. Newman announced a meeting of all of the club committees tonight at her home, 4315 Argyle Terrace. There was also an announcement by Mrs. Florence Meara, recording secretary of the Washington club, of June 14 as the opening date of the biennial national convention of the American Federation of Soroptimist Clubs to be held in Atlantic City and of June 20 and 22 as the dates of the international convention there. Representatives of 26 foreign clubs have signified their intention of attending, she said.

William Eno Talks Before Safety Group

Women's Traffic Unit of A. A. A. Hears Expert on Regulation.

William Phelps Eno, introduced by Mrs. George C. Thorpe as "traffic ambassador-at-large" yesterday addressed the Women's Safety Committee of the American Automobile Association, of which Mrs. Thorpe is president. Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways for the District of Columbia, also spoke and, with Mr. Eno, was among guests of honor at the luncheon following the program at the Sulgrave Club.

"There is no use trying to regulate traffic, unless you can educate police, drivers and pedestrians in traffic regulation," Mr. Eno told members of the committee. "Actual regulation of traffic should be entrusted entirely to the police, with power and responsibility for it. Traffic engineers should attend to the physical changes and construction desirable to facilitate traffic."

Mr. Eno set forth as the two major requirements for decreasing traffic accidents, the reduction of speed and elimination of the unfit driver. He also advocated more safety isles in streams of traffic and taking advantage of center parking in widened streets.

Mr. Eno began the study of traffic problems in New York City in 1902. Since then he has solved problems for many cities abroad as well as in the United States. He is author of five books on the subject, one in English, one in French, two which have been translated into Japanese and one into Italian.

Capt. Whitehurst brought a scale model of the proposed Dupont Circle underpass, one of the major projects in the five-year plan to relieve traffic congestion in the District. It would in no way mar the beauty of the park, he pointed out, and would take care of the heavy north-and-south traffic. He considered it the only solution because of the fact the circle is fed by ten streets, two of which are main thoroughfares.

There were questions regarding the project following his talk, one of which was on the cost—$460,000—asked by Mrs. Joshua Evans.

Sentiment at the meeting was generally in favor of the construction of the underpass, although no formal action was taken indorsing it.

Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, another member of the committee, brought up the need for a larger force of traffic officers and advisability of having mounted police.

Guests of honor at the luncheon and meeting in addition to the speakers were Mrs. Eno, Commissioner Dan Sultan, William A. Van Duzer, director of the Department of Vehicles and Traffic; Woodson Houghton, Mrs. Delos Blodgett, Mrs. George Davis, of Kansas City, wife of the president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, who was a guest of Mrs. Merle Thorpe; Mrs. Deveraux, Burton W. Marsh, director of safety and traffic engineering of the A. A. A.; W. A. Robinson, assistant director, and W. I. Cleveland, manager of the District A. A. A.

Among members who attended were Mrs. Albert W. Atwood, Mrs. Frank Conger Baldwin, Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. Blair Banister, Mrs. Laurence V. Benet, Mrs. Lloyd Biddle, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Mark L. Bristol, Mrs. Ross Collins, Mrs. Sidney F. Taliaferro, Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Mrs. Charles L. McNary, Capt. Rhoda Milliken, Mrs. Guy Despard Goff, Mrs. Garland Ferguson, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Mrs. Oscar Coolican, Mrs. Laurence Hill Green, Mrs. Reginald Huidekoper, and Miss Alma Schneider, secretary of the Women's Safety Committee.

D. A. R. Card Party To Benefit House

Interest in the proposed Chapter House for the District of Columbia, Daughters of the American Revolution, will be evidenced February 3, when 60 District chapters hold a benefit card party at the Willard Hotel.

The party promises to be the most popular social affair scheduled by the society for the mid-winter season, for the goal is in sight and several locations for the central meeting place and offices of the District D. A. R. now are under consideration.

Mrs. Ralph M. Griswold, of the Army and Navy Chapter and recording secretary of the Chapter House Corporation, is general chairman of the card party committee. She will be assisted by Mrs. Jason Waterman and Mrs. C. C. Coombs, vice chairman; Mrs. John M. Beavers, chairman of patronesses; Miss Phebe Stine, treasurer; Mrs. Gary Walters, chairman of candy; Mrs. Grant Chase, chairman of tickets, and Mrs. Rex Rhoades, chairman of tables. Mrs. Harry C. Grove is president of the Chapter House Corporation.

Birthday Observed By Delta Phi Sigma

Delta Phi Simga celebrated its fourteenth birthday anniversary yesterday with a "top hat" party at the home of Paula Helbach, 1101 Fern street northwest.

Among the entertainment features of the evening were knocking the top hat off a snowman with paper snowballs, and fishing fortunes out of a hat. The girls also enjoyed the turtle race and sitting on a jug trying to light a candle. During the course of the evening each girl deposited a penny for every year of her age into the hat, this money constituting the birthday fund, which is used for the charity work of the sorority. In return for the donation, she received a talisman rose, the club flower.

Refreshments were served by the committee in charge. In the center of the table was a large ice cream birthday cake, surrounded by talisman roses and flanked on either side by tall cup cakes, each decorated with a blue candle, were arranged in the form of the Greek letters.

The committee included Paula Hellbach, chairman; Beth Apple, Nina Miller, Margaret Parson, Amelia Burroughs, Florence Derrick and Burnetta Derrick.

NOT ONLY was there a general celebration on Founders Day by the P. E. O. Sisterhood at a luncheon Saturday, but some of the chapters held individual celebrations at the regular meetings. Chapter O had such an observance at its January meeting with Miss Hazel Nelson as hostess. The pair of large silver candlesticks used in the traditional candle-lighting ceremony was an heirloom in the family of the president, Miss Julia McMillan, having come down from Deborah Gorham, daughter of Nathaniel Gorham, signer of the Constitution. The pair was part of the wedding silver he gave his daughter.

Another feature was a tribute to Franc Rhodes Elliott, one of the seven founders, by Mrs. Katharyn Perham, of Chapter A, Montana. Mrs. Perham was an art student of Mrs. Elliott and for many years her close friend.

MRS. HUGH PETERSON, wife of Representative Peterson, of Georgia, this year is president of the Seventy-fourth Congressional Club, succeeding Mrs. Harry B. Coffee. Mrs. Herron C. Pearson, who was elected president at the first meeting of the club, was unable to serve, and the board named Mrs. Peterson.

Green Asserts CIO Must Take New Peace Lead

A.F.L. Will Not Make First Move But Offer Still Is Open, He Says.

By the United Press.

Miami, Fla., Jan. 26.—William Green said tonight that his American Federation of Labor is ready to reopen peace negotiations with the Committee for Industrial Organization any time the John L. Lewis faction requests.

He declared the A. F. of L.'s three-man committee was prepared to meet again with the C. I. O.; that its compromise truce proposal still stands, and that "the need for a united labor movement is essential."

However, he said initiation of new unity efforts must come from the C. I. O., and indicated a belief there was no immediate prospect of such action.

Puts Blame on Lewis.

He charged Lewis with responsibility for the failure of negotiations between the warring unions last month and called upon David Dubinsky and other peace-minded C. I. O. leaders to "put it over" on their coleagues. Dubinsky, head of the International Ladies' Garment Workers, is openly favoring new attempts at armistice.

The bland, little federation president spoke on the need of labor unity after a lengthy meeting with his executive council. The council did not review the subject but prepared to discuss it in a few days.

Instead, it decided to begin a militant drive for amendment of the Wagner act, to insure protection of craft union minorities in National Labor Relations Board collective bargaining elections and certifications.

Three-Point Proposal.

Green outlined the terms of the A. F. of L. peace proposal, which he said provided:

1. That an initial settlement be made between the ten C. I. O. unions suspended from the federation but formerly affiliated.

2. That sub-committees be appointed in each industry to arrange settlement of the differences between new C. I. O. unions and their rivals in the same field which are members of the A. F. of L.

3. That, "in order to avoid a charge that the original unions were deserting their fellows," all C. I. O. members would remain outside the federation until satisfactory arrangements had been made in each industry. "Then they could all come back together, exercising all rights and privileges," Green said.

Rep. Drewry's Son Rites Are Today

Funeral services for William Emmett Drewry, 24, youngest son of Representative P. H. Drewry, of Virginia, will be held in Blandford Cemetery, Petersburg, at 3 p. m. today. Young Drewry died Tuesday of pneumonia in a Newport News Hospital.

His death was the third in the family in recent weeks. Representative Drewry's two brothers, Dr. Herbert R. Drewry, of Norfolk, and Hunter Drewry, of Charleston, W. Va., died within the past month.

Young Drewry had been employed by the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. about two years. He was educated at Petersburg, Washington and the University of Virginia.

Surviving him are his parents and two brothers, Dr. Patrick H. Drewry, jr., of White Plains, N. Y., and John M. Drewry, New York attorney.

Power Equipment Bids Asked by Hagerstown

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Jan. 26.—Bids will be asked immediately by the City of Hagerstown for a new 5,000-kilowatt turbine generator and necessary boiler equipment, at an approximate cost of $200,000 for installation in the municipal electric light plant here. The improvements at the city-owned plant will be paid for from accumulated profits, which are already on hand.

Since the power load has increased to such an extent that it will soon be necessary to run two generators, the new unit will serve as an auxiliary in the event of a breakdown at the plant.

Lewis Offers To March CIO Back Into AFL

eight resolutions were introduced by union locals proposing a third term for President Roosevelt. The convention took no action regarding the third-term resolutions, but it was understood they would be acted on later.

"If the A. F. of L. is so anxious for peace," asserted Lewis, "we'll make a proposal.

"We all want peace—peace with honor.

"Then, if the A. F. of L. wants peace, I will recommend to the 4,000,000 members of the C. I. O. that on the first day of February they march into the A. F. of L., horse, foot and dragoon, if the A. F. of L. will issue charters of the C. I. O. units, and later call a convention to arrange the details.

"Then, if that would not be pleasing to the A. F. of L., we offer the alternative proposal that on the first day of February, the A. F. of L. unions march into the C. I. O., horse, foot and dragoon, receive charters, and hold a convention later to arrange the details . . ."

Lewis beamed and shook his shaggy head and arched his heavy brows. Before his peace offer had come as a climax to his address, Lewis had declared no one had been "hurt" by the C. I. O. fight.

"Unionism has made vast gains in steel, automobiles, rubber, the transportation industry and the radio industry," he said.

"Why," he continued, "even the A. F. of L. is no weaker. Everywhere the C. I. O. has gone in and organized a basic industry, it has made it safe for the A. F. of L. to come in and gather up the butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker.

"We've kept the wind off them, so they don't need to worry. All they need to do in this country is trail along behind the C. I. O., and we'll continue to keep the wind off them."

Democratic Split May Kill Tax On 'Family' Concerns in House

against penalties on closely held companies, while Chairman Fred M. Vinson, of the sub-committee, is the leading proponent.

Opponents estimated last night they could muster "at least" six Democratic committee votes against the provision, which, added to the opposition seven Republican votes, would give a close ballot of 13 to 12 against the provision.

The section originally was included in the report following a White House conference between committee leaders and the President. The President was said to have requested stregthening of the present Section 102 of the tax law, aimed at "improper" accumulation of corporate surpluses for individual avoidance of taxes.

The President is understood to have been advised of the opposition developing within the Ways and Means Committee, and the House Administration leadership is said to be closely in touch with the situation.

The tax as proposed would differentiate between ordinary corporations and companies that are controlled by a limited number of persons up to ten. Whereas other corporations would be afforded substantial relief from the undivided profits tax, the closely held group would be forced to pay levies virtually as steep as the present scale.

About 1,000 corporations, which earn more than $50,000, and distribute less than 60 per cent of it, would be affected.

Discrimination Charged.

Democrats opposed to the tax contend it discriminates between companies doing a legitimate business on substantially the same basis.

Besides McCormack, Ways and Means Democrats who are cool to the tax are said to include Representative Lamneck, of Ohio; Fuller, of Arkansas; Boehne, of Indiana; Thomson, of Illinois, and Robertson, of Virginia. Representative Disney, of Oklahoma, and one or two other Democratic committee members were said to be doubtful.

Some opposition also was developing in the committee on the capital gains tax proposals contained in the report, providing a more gradual step-down of gain or loss percentages taken into account for tax purposes. Some members feel the provision fails to distinguish between speculative gains, of the stock market variety, and gains in the ordinary course of business.

Tramp Detained In Minor Fire at Old Smithsonian

An itinerant who, according to his story to police, descended into the basement of the old Smithsonian Building "just to get out of the cold" was held for invesigation yesterday in connection with a minor fire that threatened the structure's historic records and exhibits.

Shortly after guards discovered a blaze in the electrical switchboard, Bruce Webster Riggs was seized when he broke a window to escape the smoke. He was removed to the Fourth Precinct Station on an investigation charge pending determination of the fire's origin. He said he is from Nashville, Tenn.

'Bertie' and 'May' Wire Ex-Kaiser

Doorn, The Netherlands, Jan. 26 (AP). — Former Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany will observe his seventy-ninth birthday tomorrow happy in the belief there now is a complete reconciliation between the royal houses of Windsor and Hohenzollern for the first time since the World War.

A telegram from King George VI, Queen Mother Mary and Queen Elizabeth which was signed "Bertie, May and Elizabeth" supplied the grounds for his belief. ("Bertie" and "May" are family names for King George and his mother.)

Members of the Hohenzollern house have been received at the British court on several occasions since the war but until December there had been no sign of reconciliation with the former Kaiser himself. Now the cycle was believed to have been completed.

Senate to Try Cloture Vote to End Filibuster

pendent offices bill in the jam of measures blockaded by the filibuster. The housing bill conference report also is awaiting action and before the end of the week the farm conference report will be ready. Both housing and farm reports are "privileged" and need not necessarily displace anti-lynching.

Ironically, Senate Republicans, who have traditionally advocated anti-lynching legislation, will be placed in the position of dealing the death blow to the pending bill by voting against cloture. Minority Leader Charles L. McNary answers that no minority party can afford to support cloture. And cloture cannot be applied without minority support.

Bluffing Suspected.

Sponsors of the bill insisted McNary was bluffing when he promised virtually all of the 16 Senate Republicans will vote against cloture. But last night there was only one know defection—Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), Kansas—who said he will vote to shut off debate. Another Republican believed likely to support it was Senator James J. Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania.

Although the filibuster has continued for three weeks, it does not compare with dramatic filbusters of past years. In 1846, filibustering held up the Oregon bill for two months. In 1891 the Lodge "force bill" was defeated after 46 days of filibuster and four days of continuous session. The filibuster against the silver purchase clause of the Sherman act continued from August 29 to October 31, 1893, and was broken only after 13 days of continuous day and night sessions.

Cloture Tried 14 Times.

Cloture has been attempted in the Senate 14 times since the rule was adopted, 76 to 3, on March 8, 1917. Four times cloture has been voted, seven times it has failed and three times unanimous consent agreements have been substituted.

The cloture rule originally was approved following the successful filibuster against the Administration's armed neutrality bill in early 1917, which led President Wilson to indict "a little group of wilful men, representing no opinion but their own."

On the following occasions, cloture has been voted by the Senate:

November 15, 1919, on Versailles treaty, 78 to 16.

January 25, 1926, on World Court protocol, 68 to 26.

February 15, 1927, on McFadden banking bill, 65 to 18.

February 28, 1927, on prohibition reorganization, 55 to 27.

On the following questions, cloture has failed:

February 2, 1921, on emergency tariff bill, 36 to 35.

July 7, 1922, on Fordney McCumber tariff bill, 45 to 35.

June 1, 1926, on migratory bird bill, 46 to 33.

February 26, 1927, on Colorado River bill, 32 to 59.

February 26, 1927, emergency officers retirement, 51 to 36.

January 17, 1933, Glass banking bill, 58 to 30.

Silver Shirt Legion Asks Court to Ban La Follette Inquiry

Alleging it was a "Christian, patriotic, anti-Communist" organization, the Silver Shirt Legion of America, Inc., yesterday asked District court to issue an injunction to restrain the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee from enforcing compliance with a subpena requiring a list of the organization's membership, rules and records.

William Dudley Pelley, president-commander of the assomiation, and Spencer J. Warwick, "chief ranger," signed the request for the injunction. In their bill they stated the petition was a mere "fishing expedition" and was a violation of the rights of the organization which is composed of more than 5,000 men.

The organization intimated exposure of its membership records would render its members subject to intimidation by communistic elements.

Washington Felicitates Theodore W. Noyes on 80th Birthday

Supreme Court Justice Harlan Stone chats with Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor.

Mme. Saito, wife of the Ambassador from Japan, and Frank Hogan, Washington attorney.

By . . . Harlan Miller

If you want to influence your Congressman, don't send him a mimeographed letter . . . And better not send him a carbon copy of the letter you send to your Senator . . .

* * * *

Nor is it a good way to win Congressmen and influence Senators to have every member of your church or luncheon club sign a petition, or every member of your golf club send identical telegrams.

* * * *

The way to a Senator's wastebasket is apparently shorter than the way to his heart, especially when he receives bales of letters and telegrams exactly alike.

* * * *

I quizzed quite a few Senators to find out how vulnerable they are to their daily mail, and one fact stands out:

They do not like to have one brain yelling at them with a thousand tongues.

* * * *

"—one brain with 1,000 tongues."

A few members apparently have no such antipathies. Senator Ashurst, who has answered 150,000 letters and 28,000 telegrams in 25 years on the Hill, tolerates the right to lobby and propagandize. He admits he might be influenced by heavy mail in favor of a reasonable proposal.

* * * *

And Senator Wagner thinks that all forms of petitions are permissible in a democracy . . . He has ignored thousands of letters raiding the Treasury or stirred up by loud-mouthed radio oratory, but only after sizing 'em up and "considering the source."

* * * *

On the other hand, Senator Borah has standing instructions that floods of identical, singularly inspired letters shall not come to his desk . . . Once he wastebasketed two letters because they contained several similar phrases and sentences.

* * * *

Also, Senator Borah quoted Teddy Roosevelt, who said once:

"I could get just as many signatures to hang the man who presented this petition to me!"

* * * *

Along with many Senators and Congressmen, Senator Herring asserts that the most impressive letter from a constituent is one on a sheet of ruled paper from a 5-cent pad . . . This is a good hint to corporations and public relations men with expensive embossed stationery.

* * * *

"—the wastebasket bars the way"

Quite a few members set great store by letters which begin "This is the first time I ever wrote a letter to a public official . . ." Most of them are suspicious toward mail about bills not yet introduced or discussed on the Hill.

* * * *

When Senator Connally got a telegram which said simply "Urge you to vote for the anti-lynching bill" he promptly wired back:

"What do you think of section 2 of the bill?" . . . He assumed the voter hadn't read it.

* * * *

* * * *

But most of them think that most mail and telegrams inspired by a single source, similar in phraseology and launched in a flood, merely help reduce the postal deficit and enrich the phone companies.

If you want to influence your Congressman, better compose your own letter, put some pertinent facts and honest emotion in it, and don't try to scoop up all the gold in the Treasury for yourself.

Noyes Acclaimed First Citizen Of Capital in Tribute to Service

Noyes.

tonight as the first citizen of the Nation's Capital, that one who did not know him must needs picture Mr. Noyes as a vibrant, dynamic, two-fisted personality.

Kindly Traits Pictured.

"No carticaturist could draw anything so far removed from the fact. His most vigorous acts could accurately be termed tenderly robust. If I were asked what word I would use as best adapted to describe his personality, I would answer 'gentleness.'"

The same traits of kindliness and integrity were pictured by Harry C. Davis, who was a classmate of Noyes at George Washington University and is now a trustee of the institution, and by Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, who recently introduced a bill which would give "full suffrage rights" to the District.

Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post, paid tribute to the work of Mr. Noyes as editor of the Washington Star and also to his civic leadership.

"As the editor of The Washington Star—and on that newspaper the editor is the individual who directs the policy of the paper—he is known everywhere for his invincible fairness, for his passion for moderation, for his belief that understatement is far better than exaggeration," Mr. Meyer said.

"He has been the spearhead of the attack aimed at breaking down the civic restrictions under which residents of the District of Columbia live," Mr. Meyer continued. "It is a fight still far from won, but Mr. Noyes has shown us the road we must travel to win it.

"Efforts of his were successful in bringing about the founding of the Public Library System of the District. He was the first president of the library's board of trustees and has served long years as a member of that board.

"With unselfish devotion to these and other community causes, he has set a record of service that our younger men can do no better than to follow—no matter what their particular fields—if they, too, would do their part as citizens of Washington."

Greetings from other Washington papers were extended by Frank E. Waldrop, representing the publisher of the Washington Times and the Washington Herald, and by John T. O'Rourke, managing editor of the Washington Daily News.

"Oldest Inhabitant" Talks.

John Clagett Proctor, vice president of the Oldest Inhabitants of the District, of which Mr. Noyes has been president since 1908, stressed the work of Mr. Noyes in historical societies of the city.

"As long as you live we will never elect anyone else president of the Oldest Inhabitants," Proctor declared, ending his remarks with a poem entitled "When Theodore Was Born."

All three of the District Commissioners were in attendance. Speaking for them and as a longtime friend of the honor guest, Chairman Melvin C. Hazen termed Noyes the "outstanding and leading citizen of the District, an inspiration and example to the young men of this country."

G. W. Pays Tribute.

"You have accomplished more for the city you love so well," Commissioner Hazen declared, "than any other man within its borders. When I am old enough to retire, I hope you will be made the Mayor of Washington."

Robert V. Fleming, chairman of the board of trustees of George Washington University and a past president of the Board of Trade, spoke in behalf of the contribution Mr. Noyes has made to work of the latter organization.

"During the whole of the half century he has been a member he has almost daily worked for the progress and development of the board and through it for the betterment of the welfare of Washington and its people," Fleming declared. Mr. Noyes has twice served as president of the board. His father, Crosby S. Noyes, was one of its founders.

Fleming said the board felt many of its outstanding achievements would have been impossible "without the courage, the energy and leadership of the man whose 80 years of fruitful life occasion this celebration."

15 Envoys Attend.

Robert J. Cottrell, executive secretary of the Board and secretary of the dinner committee, said that during the last few days hundreds of resolutions of congratulations had been received. He read those from President Roosevelt, Chief Justice Hughes, Vice-President Garner, Senator Carter Glass, the Federation of Citizens Associations of the District, the District Commissioners, the Washington Loan and Trust Co., trustees of the Public Library, trustees of the George Washington University, the Association of Oldest Inhabitants and the National Geographic Society.

An album containing these and the other messages was presented to Mr. Noyes, along with a clock and candlesticks. Collady, who made the presentation, said they were "gifts from the people of Washington."

Among the group of notables seated at the speaker's table were Ambassador and Mme. Troyanovsky, of the Union of Soviety Socialist Republics; the Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Saito, the Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de Castillo Najera, the Ambassador of Spain and Senora de los Rios, the ambassadors of Turkey, Poland, Equador and China, the Minister of Portugal and Senhora de Bianchi, the Minister of El Salvador and Senora de Castro, the Minister of Colombia and Senora de Lopez, the Minister of Lithuania and Mme. Zadeikis, the Minister of Latvia and Mme. Bilmanis, the Minister of Panama and Senora de Boyd, the Minister of Greece, Justice Harlan F. Stone, of the United States Supreme Court; Senators Albert W. Barkley, Arthur Capper, Glass and Lewis, Representatives Sol Bloom, Ross Collins, Sam Rayburn, Hatton W. Sumners, John Taber and U. S. Guyer.

Jurists Attend.

Representatives from the Brazilian and Belgian Embassies and the Legations of Venezuela and Bolivia; Alfred A. Wheat, chief justice of the District Court; Justice W. Cox. of the District Court; Justice D. Lawrence Groner, of the United States Court of Appeals for the District; Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission; representatives from churches and educational institutions of the District; past presidents of the Board of Trade; the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington; Mrs. William A. Becker, director general of the Daughters of the American Revolution; a group of leading journalists, and others, including Frank B. Noyes, president of the Associated Press and brother of the principal guest; Newbold Noyes, a nephew, and John W. Thompson, jr., a grandson.

The speeches were broadcast over three radio stations.

The Advertising Club of Washington yesterday adopted resolutions acclaiming Mr. Noyes "for the singular qualities of heart and mind that established reader confidence—the backbone of all advertising."

Group Medicine Is Necessity, Government Workers Are Told

Group medical practice must be adopted if substantial progress is to be made in reducing the toll taken by preventable diseases, Dr. Gingsley Roberts, medical director of the Bureau of Co-operative Medicine, New York, said here yesterday.

Directing his arguments to critics of Group Health Association, Inc., the HOLC-sponsored clinic, he charged that lives are being sacrificed daily "because of delay in prompt medical treatment which is inevitable under our present system."

Here for a series of speeches, Dr. Roberts' latest defense of the group system and attack upon the conventional fee method came last night in an address to Government employes in the Agriculture Department auditorium.

"With diseases and conditions which can be prevented, or which can be benefited in incipient stages, our fee system presents an economic barrier against the receipt of care at the most favorable periods," he said in an interview.

"Organized medicine has come to the defense of the family doctor. I, too, revere the general practitioner of the past, but his day is just done. There is no single physician today who is capable of giving complete medical and surgical service.

"There is no way, under private practice, where all the advantages of medical research, all the knowledge and equipment at our command, can be made available to the average person," he added.

Denying that group medicine destroys the traditional relationship of doctor and patient, as charged by organized physicians, he said the system which he espouses "promises the best service the medical profession can give."

"No argument is necessary," he said, "to support the position that care given by doctors who are years behind developments in modern medical progress is both wasteful and, in many cases, harmful. The doctors are not to blame because economic stress keeps them from postgraduate study. Under group practice they would have that opportunity.

"A report of the committee on maternal mortality of the New York Academy of Science states that 61 per cent of preventable maternal deaths occurred because of negligence of physicians."

He said groups of physicians representing all branches of medical science are destined to take the place of the individual practitioner.

Salesman's Body Recovered From Potomac River

The body of William E. Wilde, 45-year-old salesman, was recovered from the Potomac River near Arlington Memorial Birdge yesterday. He had been dead about a month, doctors believed.

Wilde was identified by Mr. and Mrs. James F. Woodhouse, of the 1300 block of Rhode Island avenue northwest, where he had lived at one time. Identification was made after police discovered in the dead man's pockets papers bearing his name and an address in Chester, Pa.

An inquiry in Chester revealed that Walde checked out of a hotel there about a month ago. Hotel officials told police that Wilde was a patent medicine salesman.

Lanham Scores Roads Building Near Airport

Calls Laboratory Menace to Proposed Gravelly Point Site.

Steps were taken yesterday by Chairman Fritz Lanham, of the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee, to put a stop to construction of a Public Roads laboratory which would jeopardize the projected Gravelly Point airport.

Acting on a decision of the committee, he sent letters to Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and Thomas H. McDonald, chief of the Bureau of Public Roads, requesting that work on the laboratory near the Gravelly Point site be discontinued pending completion of the committee's consideration of a measure to authorize the construction of the air terminal.

Previous testimony, asserting the laboratory would constitute a hazard to the proposed airport, was denied yesterday by H. S. Fairbank, chief of information of the Bureau of Public Roads, who said tentative layout of the landing field showed the building would not interfere with landings and take-offs.

He added that Mount Vernon Boulevard would pass through a tunnel under action of the landing field, as planned by the Bureau of Public Roads.

This proposal met with pronounced opposition from C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks, who said he could not speak for the Secretary of the Interior, but "felt sure the Department of the Interior would look with some alarm at putting a 1,000-foot tunnel on the Mount Vernon Boulevard."

In his testimony, Fairbank emphasized construction on the road laboratory had been deferred until a letter stating that the building would not be a hazard to aviation near the airport had been received from Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. The $957,000 contract for the work was let about December 17, he said.

Fairbank said the laboratory had been planned for several years. He added that the bureau had refrained from beginning any activity at the site until after the National Airport Commission had made its report favoring an air terminal at Camp Springs, Md.

Restaurants' Chief Favors Minimum Wage

Association Manager Asks Differential in Pay of Employes.

The majority of restaurant owners in the District favors a minimum wage for waitresses, Robert J. Wilson, business manager of the Washington Restaurant Association, told the minimum wage conference yesterday.

"However," Wilson declared, "there should be a difference between service and nonservice employes."

The conference, which will hold the last public hearing tomorrow before going into executive session, is attempting to set a legal weekly wage for the women workers in the hotel, restaurant and allied industries.

The employe group on the conference has submitted a budget which calls for a minimum wage of $19.90 a week. On the other hand, the employer group has submitted three distinct budgets for different classifications of that category, the wages ranging from $11.91 to $15.05 per week.

The top scale of $15.06 would be paid to waitresses, counter and salad girls, cafeteria girls, food checkers, telephone operators and elevator operators. Budget No. 2 asks for a $13.41 weekly pay to kitchen help, dish and glass washers, bus girls and clean-up help.

Electric Cut Nets Savings Of $769,634

House Unit Votes Study of Power Need to Cost $15,000.

A rate reduction which will effect an estimated savings of $769,634 to customers of the Potomac Electric Power Co. was announced by the Public Utilities Commission yesterday coincident with approval by a congressional committee of a $15,000 appropriation to finance a study of District power needs.

At the same time the commission, on the basis of the company's past earnings, slashed Pepco's net return from 6.5 to 6 per cent on a valuation of $72,000,000.

The savings to Washington electric power consumers was effected under a "sliding scale" arrangement whereby earnings above the allowed rate of return to the company are divided between Pepco and its consumers. The savings will be reflected in reduced charges for electric power.

The District power survey would be conducted by the Federal Power Commission under an item approved by the House Appropriations subcommittee.

Following a public hearing Tuesday when Pepco and District officials testified before the P. U. C., it was announced that the hearings would be continued Thursday.

Yesterday's order, therefore, was a surprise. The saving to consumers eventually may reach $1,000,000.

The commission also ordered the company to extend its rate reduction to the Federal and District governments, which consumed approximately $1,500,000 worth of power last year.

Basis for the estimate of $1,000,000 possible savings, it was explained, was an expected increase in consumption from normal city growth plus probable increased use of power under the new schedules.

Statistics produced by the P. U. C. pointed out that, while the Capital Transit Co. has used less power in the last year than formerly, total consumption and revenues have increased.

Total consumption last year, according to commission statistics, was 720,500,137 kilowatt hours, 8 per cent more than consumed in 1936. The 1936 figure itself represented an increase of 9 per cent over consumption in the previous year.

Pepco revenue in the last year was $14,663,381. In 1936 it was $14,031,182 and in 1935 the figure was $13,092,415, the statistics revealed.

Worst Ice Jam in 30 Years Engulfs Honeymoon Landmark

The Falls View Bridge is a landmark known to millions of tourists and honeymooners and spans the Niagara River about 500 yards below the falls. Clark Griffith

50 Years in Baseball

By Shirley Povich

Chapter Twelve.

CLARK GRIFFITH HAD PROVED an efficient "trigger-man" for the American League in its 1901-02 raids on the National League and, when he asked for the management of the league's New York venture as his reward, President Ban Johnson readily agreed.

Charles Comiskey, owner of the Chicago White Sox, was loath to surrender Griffith as manager at the end of the 1902 season, but eventually consented under pressure by League President Johnson. Johnson pointed out to Comiskey that a strong team in New York was vital to the league's success and none was better equipped to manage a club than Griffith, who had won a pennant with Chicago, two seasons before. In Griffith's favor also was the fact that during his National League pitching days he had always been a prime favorite in New York.

Griffith had rendered Comiskey and the American League another signal service before the season of 1902 opened. He had learned that George Davis, captain and star shortstop of the Giants, was dissatisfied with the salary terms offered. Griffith immediately entrained for New York in an effort to induce Davis to jump to the American League.

The acquisition of Davis would be another jolt to the National League and Griffith was intent on signing the star. But word of his intentions apparently preceded him for, when he arrived in New York, he was visited by a representative of Andrew Friedman, backer of the Giants.

"Mr. Friedman knows you are in the city to try to sign Davis," Griffith was told. "Mr. Friedman just wants to let you know that he is disgusted with Davis' salary demands. Because he knows the American League is bidding for him, Davis is trying to hold the Giants up for an outrageous salary. Well, Mr. Friedman has told me to advise you that you do not have to bid high for Davis. He does not want Davis to profit in any deal. Davis is an ingrate and Mr. Friedman says he's yours for the taking. You can have him."

Site at 166th Street and Broadway Selected.

GRIFFITH HAD ROUNDED UP an imposing team of stars for the 1903 venture into New York, but the American League was still sorely beset by the difficulties of breaking into Manhattan. The Giants were in possession of the only ball park of major league proportions in the city and were convinced that the American League could not find a suitable site for a park.

GRIFFITH as he looked as manager of New York's first American League team.

When the American League finally decided on a plot of land at 166th street and Broadway, the Giants greeted with laughter the selection of that site. The subways terminated ten blocks from 166th street, leaving the fans who wished to attend American League games a long, tiresome walk to the ball park. The plans for the construction of the park would necessitate cutting off several streets and the Giants ridiculed the possibility that the American League could gain the necessary permission from the city authorities.

But League President Johnson who, in the earlier days of the American League, had displayed a positive genius for organization, was not going into the New York project blindly. His first move in the invasion of New York was to interest Frank Farrell, a politician high in the councils of Tammany Hall, in the American League club and to install him as the controlling stockholder. Joe Gordon, a mere figurehead, was named president.

Johnson had counted correctly on Farrell's influence. Farrell was permitted to deal as he saw fit with several streets in the vicinity of the ball park, and construction started immediately.

New York's Newspapers Hostile to New League.

FROM THE SITE OF THE PARK, high on a hill, the New York American League club drew its name of Highlanders. To level off a playing field, Farrell's workmen were literally forced to blast through solid rock. But Farrell had plentiful resources to finance all operations and, to the surprise of the Giants, the project was completed with a grandstand seating 12,000.

Griffith, who superintended the construction of the playing field, learned that the Highlanders' park was, in fact, a historic site. He watched workmen unearth ancient bullets, gun stocks, grapeshot and bayonets and, on investigation, discovered that the park had once been a battleground of Washington's forces in the Revolutionary War.

But, despite his success in signing a team of star players and Farrell's splendid co-operation in constructing a park, Griffith was still troubled over one phase of the American League's invasion of Manhattan. The city's newspapers were hostile toward the new league.

The Giants were tremendously popular . . . what, with McGraw having joined the club . . . and New York's baseball writers viewed with suspicion the entrance of the Highlanders on the Manhattan scene. The American League was regarded as an unstable, fly-by-night circuit. Despite Griffith's oratory to the contrary, New York sports writers were unconvinced.

Griffith realized that something heroic must be done for the Highlanders when all of New York's sports editors, who announced they were sending correspondents to the Southern training camp with the Giants, refused to "cover" the training activities of Highlanders.

Thus, Griffith's immediate problem was to meet the threat of an utter lack of publicity for the American League in New York. Without at least a fair play in the sports pages, the Highlanders would be lost, Griffith knew. It was a discouringing turn in the New York fortunes of Griffith, who had rounded up his team and surmounted all obstacles in obtaining a park.

Griffith Hires Sports Writer to Get Publicity.

IN DESPAIR, GRIFFITH TURNED to an old friend, Jime Price, sports editor of the New York Press. The Press was not a fashionable paper. In fact, it was second-rate. Griffith, always a convincing talker, pointed out to Price that the Press could not hope to compete with other Manhattan papers in coverage of the Giants; that the Press would have little to lose, perhaps much to gain by giving its support to the American League team. Whatever interest the American League commanded in New York would thus attach itself to that newspaper and, in the event that the Highlanders were successful, the Press would cash in heavily, Griffith argued.

Price was struck by Griffith's logic and cast his lot with the American League, he promised. If Griffith would arrange to have telegraphic reports of the Highlanders' training in the South sent to the Press daily and pay all charges, the Press would print the articles, Price agreed.

Griffith's next task was to hunt up a baseball reporter. He knew his man, but was at a loss to find him. Jim Bagley was Griffith's choice. Griffith had remembered him as a brilliant baseball writer, who wrote under the name of "Right Cross," but Bagley was no teetotaler. His addiction to drink had cost him job after job and currently he had not been seen in New York for a month.

Griffith eventually caught up with Bagley in a Bowery saloon, wrenched him away from the place and extracted Bagley's pledge to stay sober. On Bagley's promise, Griffith outfitted him with a new wardrobe and took him South with the Highlanders to their Atlanta training camp.

It was a shrewd move. Not misplaced was Griffith's faith in Bagley. From the Atlanta camp, Bagley began to write such entertaining accounts of the Highlanders' prospects that New York fans were intrigued and the circulation of the Press zoomed. Before the training season was over, every other New York paper began to bombard Bagley with requests for articles on the Highlanders. When Griffith came North to start the 1903 season, the Highlanders were commanding equal space with the Giants in the Manhattan sports pages.

St. John's Five Routs Gonzaga, 41 to 23

The Washington Post Sports

Before the largest crowd ever to see a scholastic game in the C. U. gym, St. John's routed Gonzaga last night, playing virtually on the toes of an overflow of rooters. Stretched out on the floor is Jim Giebel, St. John's high scorer. The Gonzaga players are Fred Rice, No. 5; Joe Heiberger, No. 14, and Buddy O'Brien, No. 4. Dallas Shirley, former Eastern High star, is the referee.

3,500 Watch Cadets Coast to 9th Victory

By Jack Munhall.

In the boiler-factory quiet of C. U.'s gym last night St. John's powerful five laid the cornerstone for a successful defense of its Catholic Prep title by trimming Gonzaga's basketball representatives, 41-23.

Thirty-five hundred spectators, the largest crowd of the scholastic season, packed every inch of the spacious gym and overflowed on the playing floor to watch the smooth-working Cadet team win the first of its two annual meetings with the Purple.

By its victory, the ninth in ten starts, St. John's definitely established itself as the city's outstanding schoolboy team to the unqualified approval of everybody present. Gonzaga, although it played even a little above its normal game, was simply overpowered by as accurate a gang of leather pourers as ever wore the Scarlet and Grey colors.

Jim Giebel, lithe center; Rosy Swagart, guard, and his running mate, Joe Gallagher, were the big factors in St. John's surprisingly easy triumph. Between them they accounted for 33 points in addition to flashing deadly passing which consistently set up easy shots. Giebel was the individual leader with his six baskets, five made on cool "set" shots which neglected to touch the rim.

Swagart Busy Boy.

Swagart, was next with five field goals and a free throw while Gallagher flicked the cords for five baskets, all in the first half.

Buddy O'Brien, Gonzaga forward, was best for the Purple with 5 points while Fred Rice, 14-year-old sophomore guard and Lane O'Donnell, lanky center, kicked in with 3 and 4, respectively.

For one period it appeared that Orell Mitchell's fleet Gonzaga boys were going to make a real battle of it, but as the game wore on and St. John's sharpshooters warmed up to the business of flipping the ball through the hoop, the score mounted faster than a New York taximeter.

In a futile effort to halt the flow of Cadet points, Gonzaga abandoned its unsuccessful zone defense for a man-for-man plan in the third period when St. John's led 32-18, but little difference was noted for the Johnnies were not missing shots.

In the final minutes of the last quarter, the St. John's junior varsity was sent in and it held the tiring Gonzagans while making a foul shot in its own right.

Gonzaga hopped to an early lead when O'Brien whipped in a brace of free tosses but Gallagher, whose uncanny ability to find the basket with long shots feature the game, tied the count on a heave from the foul stripe. Giebel and Bap Batista also registered baskets to send St. John's ahead 6-2.

Rice Makes Score.

Rice came back to score for Gonzaga and the score favored the Johnnies, 8-8, at the end of the initial stanza. The second period was closely-fought but in the waning minutes, Gallagher shoved St. John's far to the front by sinking three successive pot shots to give his team a 17-11 lead at half.

Although fighting right up to the final gun, Gonzaga was never able to get back into the running, and slowly but surely fell farther behind before the excellent marksmanship of Giebel and Swagart, who between them rifled in 10 points in the final quarter.

Although the scoring column shows but one point to honor his name, Jimmy Mulvihill, scrappy St. John's guard, was an important cog in the workings of his team. He battled for every vantage and often wrenched the ball from the hands of a Gonzaga player

4-Mile Crew Race Is Set

Poughkeepsie Regatta to Be Rowed on June 27.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 26.—The board of stewards of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association today set Monday, June 27, as the date for this year's championship race on the Hudson, at Poughkeepsie, but turned down a suggestion to cut the race from 4 to 3 miles.

The date is subject to confirmation by the member colleges and the starting times, beginning with the freshman race at 2:45 p. m. (E. S. T.), are dependent upon tides.

The board listed four reasons for rejecting the recommendation of the coaches of the member colleges to lower the distance of the championship course.

Four miles, the board agreed, is a better test of rowing strength. In addition, there is no undue strain at that distance, the stewards pointed out, adding that the 4-mile run is the traditional distance for not only the Poughkeepsie Regatta, but the Yale-Harvard race and the Oxford-Cambridge competition as well. The stewards held the race would lose some of its traditional color and appeal if cut to 3 miles.

It also was brought out at the meeting that the University of Pennsylvania, on whose behalf the recommendation to lower the distance was made, would begin rowing this spring on a course above Flat Rock Dam, on the Schuylkill River, where there is a 4½-mile stretch for the purpose. Continued work on that course, it was said, would enable Penn to return to Poughkeepsie and its 4-mile stretch by 1939.

Pastor Here For Workout On Saturday

Man Who Stayed Route With Louis to Face Everett Monday.

Bob Pastor, the New York heavyweight who boosted his stock considerably by going the route with Joe Louis, is scheduled to arrive in Washington Saturday morning to complete his training for his Monday night engagement with Buck Everett at Turner's Arena. Under present plans, Pastor will stage a public workout at the arena on Saturday afternoon.

While Pastor hopes to check off Everett as another victim on his barnstorming tour that he expects to climax in a heavyweight championship battle, Everett aims to defeat the New Yorker and put himself in line for a chance at the top money. Pastor and his manager, Jimmy Johnson, Jr., have decided to fight the way to a title shot.

Pastor already has two scalps dangling from his belt in this campaign. He showed in Syracuse against Hans Haverlick and took the verdict before moving to New York City to knockout Buck Treacy. Following the Everett show, Pastor is booked to meet Al Ettore at Philadelphia on February 14.

Everett has been busy conditioning at the local Huron gym and has shown good form against Nate Brown and Andy Keady, a pair of capable sparmates. Everett dropped out of the fistic picture last winter, only to reappear in what he said was "the best shape of his career." He looked the part when he flattened Murray Kanner in his first "comeback" appearance here.

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn says the Everett-Pastor match is the most expensive since the arena has been a fistic center. While he would not disclose the guarantee, he says Pastor is receiving the best money ever afforded a fighter for an indoor show here.

Ahearn also says that Manager Johnston is doing him a favor in allowing Pastor to perform here. It seems that Ahearn released Pastor from a fight here so that he could meet Al Delaney in New York two years ago, on the promise that Pastor would appear at Turner's at some future date.

Eastern Cage Group Declines to Expand

Representatives of Six Member Universities, in Conference Here, Table Applications; Murphy Re-elected President.

By Bob Garrison.

Closing its doors to outside schools for at least another year, the Eastern Inter-Collegiate Basketball Conference, meeting yesterday at the University Club, voted to defer action on "approximately half a dozen" applications for admission.

Calling special attention to the fact that George Washington University was not an applicant nor was it issued an invitation to join with the select group of six colleges, the conference voted favorably to table the new membership question until next year's meeting at Pittsburgh.

Georgetown University, host to representatives from the other five member schools, fared well in election of officers, as H. Gabriel Murphy, graduate director of Hoya athletics, was re-elected president of the conference for another year.

Murphy headed the list of officers who were re-elected. Other officers included Clarence Overend, of Pittsburgh, vice president, and Neil Fleming, of Penn State, secretary.

Held Closed Session.

The representatives from the athletic offices of Carnegie Tech, Georgetown, Penn State, Pittsburgh, Temple and West Virginia met behind closed doors for more than two hours while word was awaited on the outside as to whether applications for admission from several large Eastern schools would be accepted.

"But," Murphy said, "We did not even discuss the matter. The only mention made of it was the motion to table the applications until a later date."

Since the organization does not meet until next year, at Pittsburgh, it was taken to mean that the league will remain a six-school affair. Murphy said, however, that although several applications had been made informally only one school had made formal request for entrance.

As for as George Washington's entering the loop or a play-off with the winner of the Eastern Intercollegiate League (Ivy League) was concerned, nothing was said or done.

Max Rinehart, newly appointed director of athletics at George Washington University, stated that the Colonials had made no application for entrance.

"Of course, we are interested in the conference, just as any other school in the East, and recognize its prestige and importance, especially since it is now affiliated with the Eastern Intercollegiate athletic group. But we haven't made any attempt to gain entrance, as far as I know, and I probably would know."

Asa Bushnell Speaks.

Asa S. Bushnell, newly-appointed executive director of the Eastern Intercollegiate Athletics, which ties up with 55 leading Eastern schools, made a special visit to Washington to address members of the Conference.

Although he welcomed the Conference into his organization and put his vote of approval on the friendly relations already begun by the Conference and its leading rival, the Eastern League, several weeks aga, he did not discuss the playoff between the two groups.

Neither did the plan come up in discussion at the meeting which preceded Bushnell's talk.

Patty Berg Victor Over Mrs. Walper

District Golfer Halves First Nine; Kathryn Hemphill Wins.

By the Associated Press.

Patty Berg, Minneapolis star, found hard going in her match with Mrs. Leo Walper, of Washington, D. C., but won 4 and 2 after being tied on the first nine.

Tomorrow, Miss Berg meets Mrs. Jane Cothran Jameson, of Palm Beach, who today eliminated Audrey Phipps, also of Palm Beach, 4 and 3.

Kathryn Hemphill, Columbia, S. C., defending champion, had little difficulty in winning 6 and 4 from Marian McDougal, of Portland, Oreg., a newcomer in winter golfing circles. Miss Hemphill meets Jean Bauer, Providence, R. I., in the semifinals. Miss Bauer won today from Louise Gardner, Winnetka, Ill., 6 and 4.

The gallery which followed the Berg-Walper contest saw the Washington player match strokes with the favorite for the first four holes, drop the fifth, tie the count again on the sixth, then give up the eighth but take the ninth to stand all even. Mrs. Walper failed to hold the fast pace on the back nine, however, and the Minneapolis redhead ran out the match 4 and 2.

D. C. Commission May Lose College Boxing Revenue

A bill to remove District collegiate boxing from the hands of the local Boxing Commission will be presented to the House of Representatives today by Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia.

The bill calls for an amendment in the boxing law of 1934 which gave the commission power to tax collegiate boxing teams and shows.

If the bill is enacted into law the 5 per cent on gross receipts and $10 tax per team member, among other revenues, would be eliminated and the local schools would operate free of taxation.

At present the only school that would be affected is Catholic University, as George Washington and Georgetown University are without boxing teams. Randolph is a former athletic director of Davis-Elkins University in his home State.

U. S. Table Tennis Team Downs Irish

London, Jan. 26 (AP).—The United States men's team, defenders of the Swaythling Cup, routed Ireland today, 5 to 0, and entered a three-way tie with England and Austria in the world table tennis championships. A play-off will decide which team will meet Hungary in the final round.

The American women's team, battling to retain the Corbillon Cup, won from Wales, 3 to 1, for its fourth victory in seven matches.

Waner Loses To Matthews

By the Associated Press.

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 26.—Paul Waner, Pittsburgh outfielder, faded from the Miami Biltmore left-handers golf tournament today before the booming shots of J. L. Matthews, Miami printer, and it was up to Lloyd Brown, of Cleveland, to keep the cup in the baseball family.

The Pirate slugger carded a 79 as his putting turned sour. Two down at the turn, Waner didn't win a hole from the husky Miamian, who hits the ball as far as the average professoinal.

"I had some misgivings over the tournament," Waner said. "That's the reason I brought Brown over from Sarasota. We want to keep this cup in the family."

BOB HARLOW, North Carolina newspaper writer, has suggested that New York City is not the sports capital of the country at all and that four or five Associated Press comment columns per day under datelines from Gotham is carrying it too far . . . Out at C. U. the athletes have just about taken over the Tower, student publication . . . WAYNE AMBROSE, basketball star, is a frequent contributor, while JAY TURNER, light heavyweight boxer, is a sports columnist . . . New York, Jan. 26.—Progress of the Pittsburgh Pirates will command unusual attention this season because many baseball students figure this is a "climax" campaign for Manager Pie Traynor.

Perhaps it is fortunate that the popular Pie will be able to concentrate solely upon managing during this important drive. No longer will he be listed as a player-manager. No longer must he try to keep himself in such condition that he could step in at third base in case of emergency. For the first time in 18 years, his name will not appear in the box scores at all.

• • • •

The "Framingham Flash," rated generally as one of the greatest third-sackers of all time, is tackling his fourth full season as pilot of the Corsairs. He succeeded George Gibson as manager in June, 1934. Despite the elevation of "Pie" to the pilot house for a portion of that season, the Pirates dropped to fifth place, from second in '33.

• • • •

Pittsburgh finished fourth in '35 and '36 and third last year. For some clubs in the National League, these positions would have seemed okay. But not for the Pirates. Traynor was operating each season under a psychological handicap. Each spring, reports from the training camp indicated that the Pirates were blessed with the best material in the circuit and that they were virtually certain to be formidable pennant contenders.

• • • •

Because the club did not play up to expectations, there has at times been considerable sniping at Pie by Smokey City fans and baseball writers. During the midseason of 1937, the Pirates went into a tail spin and there was a grand clamor for Traynor's scalp. Fortunately the Buccaneers staged a fine rally late in the season—a rally that probably saved Pie's job.

• • • •

Among newspaper men of the country, Traynor is one of the most popular managers in the game. The tall, dark-haired, amiable fellow has few enemies among the scribes. Despite this personal friendship, however, there are some writers who believe Pie has been too mild-mannered and easy-going with his players—that his club discipline was not strict enough to attain maximum efficiency. I do not know if those writers are correct. Anyway, the Pittsburgh Pirates' brass hats still had confidence in Pie's managerial ability at the end of the 1937 season. On October 14, President William E. Benswanger announced that Pie had been signed to a new one-year contract.

• • • •

Facing the 1938 campaign, there are two factors that may provide problems in Pie's attempts to keep the Pirates in the pennant race. (1) The Pirates are in the midst of a reconstruction program—a campaign to bring in "new faces," and (2) certain veterans, headed by belligerent Paul Waner, feel that this "new faces" campaign is merely a move by the club to save money, instead of providing high-paid help who might win the pennant. Pie's first job will be that of improving the club's morale—and that is a very important job with this particular band of athletes.

• • • •

Next Pie must build up a pitching staff. Of the 29 players on the Pitt roster, 14 are hurlers. Big Jim Weaver has been sold to the Browns, and Cy Blanton is having salary difficulties with the front office. His most promising rookies are Marvin Duke, a southpaw from the Montreal club. Truett Sewell, from Buffalo, and Bob Klinger, from Sacramento. Other "new faces" are Johnny Rizzo, hard-hitting Columbus, Ohio, outfielder, who cost $25,000 and three players, and Catcher Ray Berres, from Louisville, who had a $12,000 price tag.

• • • •

Pie didn't play much in the past two seasons, although he was eligible to do so. He decided to retire as a performer last summer, after several injuries to his infielders forced him into the line-up at the "hot corner." His long lay-off and his age, 38, ruined his play. He couldn't hit, throw or field in big league style.

• • • •

Now that he has retired from play, he will be eligible in the annual poll for election to the Cooperstown hall of fame. And it shouldn't be long before he enters. But right now, Pie is more concerned with the necessity of boosting his club toward the pennant. He realizes that the pressure is on and that this campaign probably will make or break him as a pilot.

Eduardo Roman, Bergman Confer On Grid Contest

Arthur J. (Dutch) Bergman and Eduardo Roman, head coach of the Mexican Naval Academy football team, last night were still unable to state that the Catholic University-Mexican All-Star game, tentatively scheduled for October 15, is to be played.

Although only official confirmation from the Mexican government is lacking, Bergman said that he and Roman are awaiting that action before going ahead with final plans.

The Cardinal athletic head entertained Roman here yesterday and was informed that the Mexicans plan to bring along the world famous Tapico Municipal Band, if the sanction of the Mexican government could be obtained.

Meanwhile, Bergman and Roman, here on other personal business, set the stage for the game which would be the first in a two-game series, the second of which would be played in Mexico city in 1939.

St. Louis, Jan. 26 (AP).—Big Jim Weaver, pitcher recently obtained by the St. Louis Browns from the Pittsburgh Pirates, today signed a one-year contract. The salary was not disclosed.

Fraidy Cat Outclassed By Gelding

Jockey Longden Looking Back at Rivals in Stretch Run.

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 26.—The aptly named Rollin Home won the featured grade "A" handicap here today in such impressive style that local turfites are wondering what horse is going to be able to beat the 5-year-old gelding in the sprints to come. The son of High Time, which raced in stake company at one time last season and then was dropped down until, at the recent Tropical Park meeting, he was not wanted in a $1,500 claiming affair, today simply toyed with such stars as H. P. Headley's Fraidy Cat, Mrs. Emil Denemark's Finance, Mrs. Payne Whitney's Drowsy, and T. B. Martin's Stubbs.

Rollin Home, with Johnny Longden looking back all through the stretch and easing up in the final strides, galloped home by three lengths in the silks of Mrs. G. H. Emick, of Kansas City. He covvered the 7 furlongs in 1:24 flat under 112 pounds and was a $4.80 choice.

This was Rollin Home's fifth start of the winter. He won two races at Tropical Park, finished a close second to Clocks in the Hialeah Inaugural Handicap, then won a handicap prior to today's smashing triumph. All of his races have been at 6 furlongs. Last season, the son of High Time won only three of his nine starts for earnings of $2,535.

Many in Overcoats.

Another banner crowd was on hand. Many spectators were bundled up in overcoats, there being a distinct chill in the air. The average daily attendance at this meeting is running approximately 1,000 ahead of last season.

There was little to the running of the Headliner. Rollin Home broke out of No. 2 stall as if propelled by a cannon, opened up an unbeatable lead in short order, and coasted under triple wraps through the front lane. Fraidy Cat always held Finance safe for the place position. As fast a sprinter as Stubbs found the pace far too swift.

Third in her debut and second in her next endeavor, Modest Queen today moved up into the winning column when she defeated 11 other 2-year-old platers in the 3-furlong initial contest. With "Big Time" Charlie Kurtsinger handling the reins, Victor Emanuel's Burgoo King filly stepped into a wide lead after the run for positions and breezed home with four lengths to spare. Spin On charged up with a rush on the rail and headed Spanish Mammon for the place. Kate Smith's swerving in through the final drive bothered the second and third horses. The winner was favorite, paying $7.80.

Tutticurio Is Winner.

The combination of the 6-year-old Tutticurio and Jockey Hilton Dabson sprang a surprise in accounting for the 1-mile second race, paying $26.90. Tutticurio raced in the thick of contention from the start. A long, hard drive with Corinne Glory saw the son of Tutti Frutti outlasting his rival to register by a half length. Espinaca lost the place by a length and a half. The favored Four Spot broke on the wrong foot and ran a courageous race to finish fourth.

Mrs. Emil Denemark's Bomar, 2-to-1 favorite, outfooted the platers opposed to him in the third, a gallop of 1 3-16 miles. A. O'Connell, finishing a length behind the winner, performed as if best after being turned sideways and then thrown into the air at the break. Sam Williams patiently saved ground with the gelding, came around the leaders in the stretch and caught all but Bomar. Jim John, always well up, was beaten three lengths for the place.

The first of the three graded handicaps on the card saw Black River easily defeating eight other members of the Class "C" division under the competent guidance of Jimmy Stout. First Entry was second, a length and a half behind and a like distance before Quincy. Black River, a $5.80 choice, carried his 122 pounds in admirable fashion. He was well rated behind the early pace, charged past the tiring Black Mistress in the stretch and drew out while holding the slow starting First Entry at bay. Quincy earned the show in the last stride. The 7 furlongs distance was completed in 1:25 4-5.

Mrs. Emil Denemark won her second purse of the day when Orientalist, a recent winner, came back with a hollow triumph in the Grade "B" Handicap, which was fifth on the program. Under Eddie Arcaro, Orientalist came from close behind the early leaders to open up a daylight lead in the stretch. He moved farther clear with each stride and wound up with a 5-length margin, running the 7 furlongs in 1:25, to pay the talent 3 to 1. Fair Lead, the early pacemaker, held on to beat Maedic by a length for second money.

A majority of the players did not take Javamocha's recent four-length victory seriously, with the result that the gelding returned $64.50 in winning the mile and a half contest over the turf course, seventh on the card. Gradually improving his position, the "coffee" horse (he is by Reveille out of Coffee), got to the front after the last turn and held on to win by a half-length from Later On. Mauritius was third, a length and a half behind.

The latter broke well, but was caught in close quarters between SPIN ON and KATE SMITH at the furlong pole. KATE SMITH broke a trifle slowly.

TUTTICURIO outbroke the opposition, outran the field in the opening quarter mile, then eased off the pace until straightened into the stretch, closed courageously to punishment and wore CROWNING GLORY down to win going clear. CROWNING GLORY, off slowly, moved up swiftly on the extreme outside rounding the turn, took command entering the stretch, but was unable to stave off the winner's bid. ESPINACA, rated off the early pace, finished stoutly through the stretch.

BOMAR, rushed clear going to the first turn, held his opposition safe for speed and rated in front, had something in reserve when it came to a drive to hold A. O'CONNELL safe at the end. A. O'CONNELL went into the air and broke slowly. JIM JOHN, prominent contender all the way, maintained his position gamely in the stretch drive.

BLACK RIVER, under steadying restraint in the early running, improved his position gradually on the outside when straightened into the stretch, wore the leaders down and won going away. FIRST ENTRY worked his way up steadily on the outside and closed with good courage. QUINCY, slow to find his stride, saved ground rounding the turn, swung to the outside in the last quarter mile and finished strongly to wear BLACK MISTRESS down in the last strides.

FIFTH RACE—Seven furlongs (out of chute). Purse, $1,200. Grade B Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:02. Off 4:04½. ORIENTALIST went forwardly under slight restraint until straightened into the stretch, moved up with determination when placed to pressure, easily disposed of FAIR LEAD and won in hand. FAIR LEAD broke fast, displayed keen speed and raced BULWARK into defeat, drew out in the stretch turn, but was no match for the winner. MAEDIC, on the inside in the early stages, swung to the outside entering the stretch and outstayed MARMARA in the final drive.

ROLLIN HOME took command at once, set a swift pace under slight restraint in the first five furlongs and opened up a commanding lead. Longden took him in hand through the stretch to with with speed in reserve. FRAIDY CAT, always in nearest pursuit of the winner, responded gamely to extreme pressure, but never seriously threatened the winner. FINANCE, slow to get going, shook off the others in the stretch run.

JAVAMOCHA, under restraint until midway down the backstretch, moved into contention rapidly, shook off the leaders entering the stretch, and continued determinedly to hold LATER ON safe in the final drive. LATER ON, slow to get going, began to better his position while circling the field in the last three furlongs, made a bold effort, but could not overhaul the winner. MAURITIUS, steadied off the pace while going forwardly, moved up stoutly on the stretch turn, but could not keep pace with the leaders.

Navy Five Beats Baltimore, 56-31

This Morning

WITH SHIRLEY POVICH

Bill Terry rushes to the defense of Bill Terry in approximately 5,000 words in the Saturday Evening Post and he hasn't bothered to put his guard up. A vicious attack is the best defense, Terry evidently reasoned, so he didn't spare his pets, the baseball writers.

POVICH

At one point he says bluntly that "I am not deeply impressed by a craft that could violate a public trust by misinforming millions of baseball fans." He might as well have put it that way. For Wild Bill there could be no turning back. He was so far "in Dutch" with the baseball scriveners that this was no time to cavil. He gave 'em the works, as we say in our set.

• • • •

But aside from his attack on the press box wretches, Terry's attempt to justify Terry's ebullience is not particularly convincing. He tells a cute story of being forced to pawn his wife's engagement ring during the lean minor league days, and vowing never to be forced into those circumstances again, and he points with pride to his successful holdout tactics against the Giants, plus his defiance of Manager John McGraw. But his diatribe falls slightly short of wringing any tears of sympathy in this corner for Will Terry.

• • • •

He made great point of the fact that he was justified in refusing to give to one sports editor his home telephone number. After the ball game was over, Terry reasoned, his affairs were personal and he was not to be disturbed. The thought that those same millions of fans to whom he had been misrepresented might want the true facts of a late story, evidently never occurred to Wild Bill.

• • • •

How did he expect the baseball writers to react to that Terry rule? Did he expect 'em to lavish their praises on him in print or search for the little niceties in phrasing that wou'd hold up Terry as a great guy, one to be admired?

• • • •

To give the fellow his dues, there is no quarrel with his baseball record. He literally lifted himself out of the minors, took over George Kelly's first base job and then took rank as one of the greatest hitting and fielding first basemen of all time. But other great ball players have worn their honors becomingly. Babe Ruth, who achieved more fame than Terry, was always hailed by the writers as "a good guy." And Ruth in his tiffs with the late Miller Huggins and Judge Landis never had the sympathy of the press box lads.

• • • •

This department's last experience with Terry was just before the 1937 World Series when the Giants were practicing at the Polo Grounds. In company with John Carmichael, of the Chicago News, I had interviewed Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yankees and we were bent on an interview with Terry just to keep the records straight.

• • • •

I didn't have much claim on Terry's time except the usual rights granted an out-of-town reporter, but Carmichael had been an acquaintance of Terry's for 15 years. He approached Terry with some confidence, certain that the Giants' manager would greet him at least cordially. Terry spoke.

"Hello," he said to Carmichael, and walked away.

• • • •

Terry, in his SEP article, squawks loudly that he was misrepresented in his supposed "feud" with Freddie Lindstrom and in the story that reported he was considering an offer to manage the Cleveland Indians. He goes to great lengths to point out the falsity of both stories and to chide the baseball writers for their inaccuracy.

• • • •

The Lindstrom "feud" report lingered for several years and apparently it did not occur to Terry until this week to deny it. That denial could easily have been made years ago, if Terry had chosen to set the baseball writers aright.

• • • •

And the Terry-to-Cleveland story broke, quite coincidentally at the time when Terry was haggling with the Giants over a new managerial contract. This department wouldn't go so far as to say that Terry inspired the Cleveland angle himself in an effort to get the Giants to hike his contract, but it would have been a simple matter to deny it emphatically at the time if it were not true.

• • • •

At that, Terry has nothing to lose by his magazine piece. The antipathy of the baseball writers he already had in great gobs. And he seems to have thrived on it, what with a new contract calling for $45,000 yearly for five more years. The best-loved baseball manager in history never drew that kind of money.

Lou Gehrig telegraphs: "Will be interviewed regarding coming baseball season by Robert Taylor Thursday night. Stop. They've also got me scheduled for a love scene with Fanny Brice. The sponsor—I'm not going to forget that this time—is Maxwell House Coffee. Hope you'll be listening."

And here's hoping Lou isn't husky voiced!

Middies Get Early Jump On Visitors

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 26.—In the early stages of today's basketball game, the University of Baltimore, whose players lacked height but had plenty of speed, gave the Navy a lot of trouble, but with the scoring well distributed, the Navy worked to a 24-to-17 lead at the half and ended 56 to 31 to the good.

Pellino, of the visitors, made the first points on a field goal, Laney evening matters shortly after. Reisenger shot the next one for Baltimore, a long side shot, and Gillette's goals from floor and line gave the Navy its first lead four minutes after the start.

With the scoring nicely distributed, the Navy continued to increase its margin until it led by 17 to 7 after ten minutes of play. However, the Baltimoreans, with their short forwards slipping through the Navy defense and Reisenger shooting at long range, were dropping goals every now and then.

Cages Two Fouls.

With the Navy leading, 21 to 11, Pulvino made good on two chances from the line, and Kreis and Pulvino both scored from the floor. Goals from floor and line by Laney, Navy guard, put the Navy ahead by 24 to 17 at the end of the half.

Ingram took Laney's place at the beginning of the second half and in a jiffy had whisked the ball through the ring for two field goals. Then George Ghesquiere, who had substituted for Gillette, made two from the line and followed with two from the floor to complete a run of 10 points for the Navy.

Third Stringers Shoot.

During the last three minutes of the game, a third Navy string trod the court and scored six points to the visitors two, Goranson, Bill and Wolf all scoring field goals.

The Navy used all 17 players and scoring was well distributed. As usual, the guards made strong contributions to the total. Laney, Mansfield and Ingram all being in scoring form.

George Ghesquiere, who took Gillette's place at forward and played well to near the end of the game, was high scorer with 13 points made up of five field goals and three from the line.

Capt. John Lovell Named Referee of Terp-Card Bouts

Capt. John Lovell, United States Army, licensed by the Virginia Boxing Commission, has been announced as the referee of the Catholic University and University of Maryland boxing matches, scheduled for Saturday night at the Brookland gymnasium.

Arrangements were made by Geary Eppley, director of athletics at Maryland, and Dutch Bergman, C. U. athletic head.

Selection of Lovell was made in order that fans of both school teams might be appeased by the presence of a neutral referee. Capt. Lovell is a West Point graduate and a former boxer. He has been stationed at Fort Monroe as boxing coach for several years.

JESSE JAMES.

Lightweight Title Bout Is Mat Program Feature at Turner's Arena.

The championship match—first in the light-heavyweight division ever staged in Washington—will headline an all-star card Promoter Joe Turner is staging for the benefit of the President's Paralysis Birthday Ball Fund.

It will be a one-fall-to-a-finish battle, with both contestants agreeing to scale in at 185 pounds.

James, who also campaigns in the heavyweight division, has a name a mile long. But he likes the nom de plume. His real name is Demitros Stephanos Tzigikos. He is 22, dark and handsome. He is a Greek, who was an acrobat before he chose wrestling as a profession.

James will be meeting a grappler his own weight for the first time since he opened his local campaign a few months ago. He drew with Chief Thunderbird, the powerful redskin, and lost to Steve (Crusher) Casey.

Martinelli has proved himself a top-notch performer on Eastern mats. That is why Promoter Turner gave him the call for the title with James.

The supporting card for this benefit show finds Juan Olaguivel, Spanish woodchopper, and Tommy Rae, a former Springfield College athlete, making their bows in a 30-minute bout.

Sam Singh, the Hindu, takes on Sheriff Tom Hanley, a newcomer from the Coast, and Pat Meehan, British Empire title owner, opposes Charlie Strack, former Olympic mat champion.

Reservations may be made at the Arena, Fourteenth and W. First bout is at 8:30.

GINO MARTINELLI.

Queen of Skaters Hits Long Hours; May Leave Films

New York, Jan. 26 (AP).—Sonja Henie, rated by her handlers as the most superbly trained girl athlete in history, has found the movie grind so tough she may toss it and a two-year income of about $400,000 into the ash can.

The Norwegian swan of the ice, whose secret is almost limitless stamina, has requested Twentieth Century-Fox to rip up her contract unless its directors permit her standardized working hours instead of a strain that lasts deep into the night. Her ultimatum came after her last picture, "Happy Landing," when she collapsed and fainted on the set.

"I can't stand that strain—working from early morning to 7 or 8 o'clock at night—and do not intend to do so," she said.

Stribling's Widow Seeks Accounting Of Boxer's Funds

Macon, Ga., Jan. 26 (AP).—The widow of the late W. L. "Young" Stribling asked an accounting of the "several hundred thousand dollars" earned by the one-time contender for the world's heavyweight boxing championship.

Mrs. Clara Kinney Stribling named her late husband's parents, W. L. "Pa" Stribling and Mrs. "Ma" Stribling, as defendants in her petition for a court accounting.

Judge Malcolm D. Jones signed a temporary order restraining the elder Striblings, known internationally as parents and managers of the Macon boxer, from disposing of any of the estate claimed by the widow. Judge Jones set a hearing for January 31.

Sam Baugh to Aid N. C. Grid Coach

Chapel Hill, N. C., Jan. 26 (AP).—Sammy Baugh, the Washington Redskins' sensational halfback, will help Head Coach Ray Wolf in spring football practice at the University of North Carolina this season.

Wolf, who coached Baugh at Texas Christian, said today "Slinging Sam" would come here within a few days from Houston, Tex., and would spend about three weeks with the Tarheel squad.

D. C. Attorney Haled Before Judges' Board

Robert I. Miller Ordered to Show Why He Should Not Be Disbarred.

Robert I. Miller, local attorney and race-horse enthusiast, yesterday was ordered to appear before the Police Court Board of Judges February 2 "to show cause why he should not be held in contempt of court and disbarred from practice in Police Court."

Judge John P. McMahon, presiding judge of Police Court, ordered the citation served on Miller on petition of a special grievance committee of the District Bar Association. The committee charged the attorney with "unprofessional and unethical conduct before Police Court."

The committee, appointed several months ago to investigate conditions at Police Court, accused Miller with having presented to the court a "false" telegram while defending a woman charged with larceny.

It was charged that Miller was defending Rose Holzer and on March 1 brought her into court and entered a plea of guilty. The defendant, the committee set forth, was released on her personal recognizance to appear May 6 for sentence.

May 6, the charges accuse, Miller appeared in court and requested a continuance of the case on the grounds his client was not in the city. The petitioners said they believed Miss Holzer was in Miller's office on that day.

Granted a one-day continuance, the petitioners charge, Miller returned to court May 7 with a faked telegram allegedly signed by the woman in New York City.

Miller is the third attorney to be accused of unethical conduct by the committee. Two bondsmen also have been cited. The committee, under the direction of Austin F. Canfield, includes Attorneys William A. Gallagher, George Monk and Franklyn Yasmer.

Falling Rents Begin to Check New Building

Lower Material Costs Are Offset by Advances in Wages.

New York, Jan. 26.—The decline in rents, which began in November after nearly four years of a continuous rise, was extended in December, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. The rent index, on the basis of 1936 as 100, dropped to 87.6 in December from 88.0 in November and from the peak of 88.1 in October. The building industry thus continued to be deprived of the stimulation which was primarily responsible for the expansion of building after 1933.

Building costs showed a further slight decline in December but this provided building with little stimulation since the reduction was not enough to modify the excessiveness of costs in view of the concurrent decline in rents. The cost index, on the basis of 1926 as 100, declined to 104.7 in December from 105. in November and from the peak of 105.8 in September.

While there has been a perceptible decline in the prices of building materials since last May, with the index dropping from 97.2 to a preliminary figure of 92.7 in December, this decrease has had little effect on building costs, since it has been accompanied by a rise in wage rates in the building trades.

The immediate prospect is for a further decline in rents without a sufficient reduction in building costs to bring them down to the rent level. This indicates a continuation of depressed conditions in the building industry.

Spalding Cuts Loss.

New York, Jan. 26 (AP).—A. G. Spalding & Bros., manufacturers and retailers of sporting goods, reported today consolidated net loss of $310,866 for the year ended October 31, 1937, against a loss of $912,392 the preceding year.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 26.—Trading in stocks was quiet today. Prices moved narrowly. Transatlantics weakened and the industrial list closed generally lower. Oils pointed higher. Early gains in gilt-edged issues were shaded in late trading. German bonds continued firm.

Paris—Industrial issues were on the downside of irregular bourse prices today. Internationals and railroad shares gained. Bank of France declined 95 points.

Liverpool—Wheat futures today reflected easier Argentine shippers' offers, lower freight markets and weakness in Buenos Aires and North America. Final prices were off 1½ to 1¾d.

In a quiet cotton market futures declined under light hedging and realizing in nearby positions. Trade and speculative support was small.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
Special Correspondent.

Stocks Break in Active Trade; U. S. Government Bonds Weak; Wheat Lower.

New York, Jan. 26.—Two selling waves swept over the stock market in the forenoon and prices were carried down as much as 7 points in active dealings. After that the disturbance subsided and a partial recovery in some groups took place before the close. Stock turnover exceeded 1,600,000 shares, the second largest of the month. United States bonds were irregularly lower and commodities turned downward. May wheat sold 2⅜ cents lower at 93¾ cents a bushel.

It might have been assumed by the easily agitated person that bears were determined to make hay while the sun shines and jumped short of stocks before the new rule takes effect. Actually the case was somewhat different, and reluctant long holders of stock were in many cases constrained to give up hope of early improvement in business and to let go. Their sales were heavy in the first hour and depressed prices for active issues from 2 to 5 points, sending the ticker tape several minutes behind the trading at one time.

After the first flush of pessimism had worn off, the market turned dull and dragged to the close with a mild recovery from the early low marks, but with a diminution in sales volume. At the worst Steel was down more than 3 points and some other issues, including Westinghouse, dropped as much as 5 points. Among the heavy losers were Case (down 6 points), Chrysler, duPont, Coca-Cola, Douglas, Harvester, Manville, Morris, Pullman, Sears, Timken, General Electric, General Motors, Eastman, Allied Chemical, Smelters and Bethlehem.

Labor Trouble Forecast.

The truculent pronouncement on wages of John L. Lewis, namely, that labor would fight industry to the last ditch on any attempt of business men to reduce their costs by the wage route in order to sell more goods promised no good for an early trade recovery. The fact that President Roosevelt backed up his labor organizing friend in the matter also did not help much, although nobody here believed the President's memory served him well when he was reported to have quoted certain industrial leaders whom he recently interviewed. It was difficult to believe that those industrialists and bankers had suggested that under no circumstances should wages be cut, when obviously if, as the President says, high prices, i. e., high costs, are holding down public consumption of goods.

For one thing that apparent misunderstanding of views scarcely justifies the readiness with which the markets have accepted the optimistic assurance that the Administration had agreed with business men on a great program of co-operation. It seems to be the Administration's view that co-operation means merely an obligation of industry to operate at a loss in order to keep up employment and wages and to reduce the cost of living to the wage earners—a beautiful but dumb program indeed. Just now, when the steel industry, for example, is operating around a third of capacity, when motor sales are slack, when the railroads are going into bankruptcy, the time does not seem to be especially propitious either for curious economics or labor "wars."

Looking Backward.

On April 26, 1936, President Roosevelt said that "reduction of costs of manufacture does not mean more purchasing power and more goods consumed. It means just the opposite.

"The history of the 1929 to 1933 period shows that consumption of goods actually declines with a declining price level. The reason is that in such periods the buying power goes down faster than the prices."

The first statement, that reduced costs of production mean more purchasing power, was received at the time with astonishment even by the lower grade students of economics, as obviously the opposite was true. Lower costs mean lower prices, and a consumer's dollar, half-dollar or dime, will naturally have greater purchasing power over goods so affected.

Prices and Wages.

"The only way to get volume up is to produce goods for a price the public will pay," the President told interviewers Tuesday. "But that does not mean that such price reductions can come out of wages. Those who get the profits when industry gets the volume are the ones to bear the risk of such price reductions as may be necessary to stimulate and restore volume."

Anyway, what little bird whispered into the presidential ear in 1936 that as prices are reduced (for history shows it, he cheeped) consumption also declines, and now twitters that the only way to get volume up is to put prices down? Moreover, if it was true in 1936 that "wages go up with prices" in 1938, the converse that wages go down with prices does not seem to be true.

Steel.

The dollar a share common dividend voted by the United States Steel board last autumn was a gesture of hope and action was taken rather reluctantly, it is suspected, by some of the directors. Few if any in Wall Street had expected a payment this quarter. Steel's profits in fourth quarter proved to have been about what those usually able to make good estimates anticipated—a good showing for the preferred, but less than the regular dividend. The corporation had the advantage in fourth quarter of deliveries on orders placed when business looked better than it does now. First quarter profits this year will have to pick up quickly if anything can be shown for the preferred shares.

17 Companies Report Fourth Quarter Loss

New York, Jan. 26 (AP).—Net earnings of the first 17 major companies to report results of the fourth quarter last year declined 54 per cent from the corresponding period in 1936.

Income of the 17 concerns in the final quarter of 1937 totaled $32,630,845 compared with $71,014,656 the year before.

Sharp gains during the first nine months, however, were sufficient to carry earnings for the 12 month period 10 per cent above 1936.

Steel Activity Continues Rise To 32 Per Cent

Slight Advance Is Not Indicative of Business Improvement.

New York, Jan. 26.—Steel ingot production continues to rise slowly, being estimated this week at 32½ per cent, but business shows no signs anywhere of substantial improvement, said Iron Age yesterday in its weekly survey.

"There is scarcely any sentiment in the steel industry in favor of reductions of either wages or prices, but it is generally argued that one cannot come down without the other. Some in the trade contend that to reduce both would bring on further readjustment and hesitation until the deflationary spiral had run its course.

"The continued irregularity of new steel business is illustrated by fluctuations in production rates in various districts. The Pittsburgh rate, which declined in the second week of January and remained about stationary for two weeks, has risen five points to 29 per cent, but the Chicago rate is a half point lower at 27 per cent. There has been a gain of four points in the Ohio Valleys to 31 per cent and a like increase in the Cleveland-Lorain area to 30 per cent. Wheeling-Weirton district operations have dropped four points to 52 per cent.

Current Orders Are Light.

"Except for rail tonnages that have recently been placed and some building construction jobs of fair size, current orders for steel are of small size. Those above a carload are the exception. The automobile industry's orders are only a fraction of those that were placed at this time last year. Indications are that February output of motor cars may be smaller than that of January.

"Railroad buying is the most dependable prospect in sight, provided the Interstate Commerce Commission grants a substantial freight rate increase. Hearings on the railroads' application have been concluded and arguments will be heard January 31, with an early decision expected. The steel industry's only objection to rate increases was on iron ore to interior blast furnaces.

"Despite the general inclination among the railroads to defer expenditures until they are assured of larger revenues, some business is appearing. The Chesapeake & Ohio has ordered 25 hopper cars and will place orders for 7,400 tons of track accessories. The Lehigh & New England is inquiring for 50 hopper cars. The Lehigh Valley has requested an RFC loan of $778,000, which, if granted, will assure a total outlay of $1,179,680 for repairs to 1,460 steel cars. The New Haven has asked Federal Court permission to spend $2,850,000 for 50 passenger cars and 10 diesel engines. The Nickel Plate has ordered 5,600 tons of rails and the Bangor & Aroostook is inquiring for 2,900 tons of rails and accessories."

Baltimore & Ohio Net Slumps in December

Baltimore, Jan. 26.—Net railway operating income of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for December was $701,976, a drop of $1,911,376 from the previous December. Freight revenues fell $2,666,056 while passenger income gained $58,343.

For all last year net railway operating income was $24,908,625, a decline of $5,276,690 from 1936.

Business Failures.

Business failures in the United States increased to 338 for the week ended January 20, largest total since November 9, 1933, when a similar number were recorded, Dun & Bradstreet reported yesterday. A week earlier failures amounted to 265 and a year ago 163.

The report did not reveal annual results. Operating revenues for December, 1937, totaled $979,130, compared with $1,452,690 in the like month of 1936. The traffic receipts were off 32.6 per cent.

Missouri Pacific.

Curb Stocks Drop In Heavy Trading

New York, Jan. 26 (AP).—Heavy offerings in principal groups drove prices down major fractions to 3 or more points in the curb market today.

Inactive specialities were the hardest hit, but oils, industrials and utilities displayed little resistance until the final hour when extreme losses in some cases were bettered by small fractions.

Jones & Laughlin Steel ended 5½ lower at 33, Buckeye Pipe Line was 4 lower at 35, Pepperell Manufacturing lost 5 at 68 and Aluminum Co. yielded 4½ at 76.

Less pronounced declines were scattered liberally throughout the list and included such active issues as Electric Bond & Share, Northern States Power "A," Gulfoil, American Cynamid "B," Sherwin Williams, Newmont Mining and American Gas. Transfers of 284,000 shares compared with 123,000 the day before.

Professors See Peril in Fixed Pay and Prices

N. Y. U. and Columbia Experts Urge Adherence to Law of Supply, Demand.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 26.—A group of New York University and Columbia University economists issued a signed statement today attacking "wage and price rigidities" and saying the "purchasing power of a nation can only be maintained by producing goods that are generally recognized as valuable."

Alluding only by implication to the statement in Washington yesterday by President Roosevelt favoring lower industrial prices and maintenance of wage levels, but speaking of "suggestions" to that effect, the statement said:

"We sympathize with the high ideals of the present Administration concerning the general well being of the people. We respectfully submit, however, that the way to obtain these ideals is not by arbitrarily fixing prices and wages.

"Increased production must be encouraged by facilitating readjustments according to the law of supply and demand. In a severe depression all classes must make mutual sacrifices.

"We are opposed to both wage and price rigidities, and favor flexibility, because the markets for American industry depend: (1) upon the purchasing power of all people as consumers; (2) the earnings of laborers, enterprisers (including farmers) and investors, as producers."

Discussing suggestions that corporations can "give employment without profitable sale of products," the report said "many corporations do not now have large enough surpluses to maintain wage payments in the face of deficits."

Signers of the declaration, which they said represented "our views as individual economists," were: A. Wellington Taylor, dean of the graduate school of business administration, New York University; Roswell C. McCrea, dean of the school of business, Columbia; James D. Magee, Willford I. King and Lewis H. Haney, professors of economics, New York University, and Leland Rex Robinson, of Columbia.

Trent, critic teacher at the Wilson Normal School, and Mrs. Hazel C. Taylor, assistant director of education for the Development of Education and Recreation, District WPA.

Contract Class to Start.

Mrs. Mirabel Lindsay will conduct a beginners course in contract bridge at Roosevelt Community Center, Thirteenth and Upshur streets northwest, starting tonight at 8 o'clock.

Text of Noyes' Address

The text of Mr. Noyes' speech follows:

Few things exceed in delicious sweetness the overpraise of one's devoted friends, who unconsciously ignore or minimize one's faults and failures, and magnify one's merits and successes. With deep humility and inexpressible pleasure I bow under the overwhelming volume of tributes of respect and affectionate regard which come to me from my friends tonight.

Through congratulations and commendations, spoken or written, I contact once more friends of my boyhood in South Washington; friends of my prep and old Columbian College days on Fourteenth street hill; friends of my nearly 60 years as a reporter, associate editor and editor of the Star; friends of my approximately 47 years of intimate association with the Board of Trade; friends through the Public Library, made in the campaign to create the library and as president of trustees for over 40 years; friends in the many civic organizations, the Central Labor Union and the affiliated American Federation of Labor, the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, the enthusiastically active and efficient women's organizations like the Federation of Women's Clubs and the Voteless District of Columbia League of Women Voters, and the scores of other associations which have been brought together in the Citizens Joint Committee for Fiscal Equity and for District of Columbia National Representation; friends made in George Washington University and old Columbian as a student, and as a trustee for nearly 30 years; friends in Congress and in the executive and judicial branches of the National Government; and finally a multitude of friends, fellow members of clubs, banks, societies, committees or unattached and unassociated except in the bonds of personal friendship.

Blessed With Friends.

Who are the men who by the spoken word, supplemented by letters and resolutions read by energetic Secretary Robert J. Cottrell, represent these groups of friends? My oldest and most intimate friend, Harry Davis; an outstanding figure in the Board of Trade and among the District bankers, Robert V. Fleming; an old friend representing the Oldest Inhabitants, Society of Natives and Federation of Citizens Associations, John Clagett Proctor; Commissioner Hazen, an old friend faithfully representing the District government; another old friend, our friendship dating back to the end of the last century when he was a Representative in the House of the State of Washington and I was vice president and then president of the Board of Trade, Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, representing the National Government; adding the eloquent spoken word to highly prized letters from the President of the United States and Mr. Chief Justice Hughes of the Supreme Court; another old friend, the prince of eulogists, a leader of the District bar, the future president of the National Bar Association — Washington hopes — Frank J. Hogan; and last but not least, a conspicuous leader, past and present, in our civic organizations from the presidency of the Federation of Citizens Associations to a third term as president of the Board of Trade, Edward F. Colladay.

Surely I am blessed with friends, women and men, young and old, and with the speakers who represent these friends.

Gifts Treasured.

My grateful appreciation to everyone of you individually and to you all collectively. I reciprocate heartily and sincerely your expressions of regard. I would not wish you who are here tonight to be one less in number, but regret that on account of your number and my physical disabilities, I cannot, as I desire, enjoy the handshake of good fellowship with everyone of you.

The unique and wonderful "Book of Remembrances" and the inscribed silver clock and candelabra, which give material embodiment to your good wishes, will be treasured always by me and my family as highly valued memorial souvenirs, and the inspiring thought which they convey will remain deeply impressed upon the family memory, as long as memory endures.

The friendly greetings, deeply appreciated, from my colleagues of the Washington newspapers have a practical as well as a sentimental value. Unity of action in respect to the vital needs of Washington, disregarding or subordinating jealousies and clashing ambitions and differences of opinion on minor issues, will multiply the power of the local press to protect the Washingtonian against unjust assault and to build up in its glorious future the newer, greater Washington. In my opinion, never before have the Washington newspapers recognized so clearly that their primary allegiance, next to loyalty to the flag, is to the people of Washington; never before have our newspapers been more ably and helpfully conducted in the community interest, and never before has there been greater need of this unity of action to protect and promote the welfare of the Washingtonian.

The demand of unity of action that comes from civic loyalty applies to all of us who are enlisted in the civilian army which fights for Washington. The obligation impressed upon us is to organize, and then to bring together in unity of action our organizations, concentrating the collective strength of all in the battle to win the vital objecives of today's campaigns.

Its Objectives.

What are these vital obectives?

1. The right and power of voting representation in Congress and the Electoral College. Since the 600,000 Americans of the District pay national taxes, obey national laws and go to war in the Nation's defense, they are entitled on American principles to be represented in the national Government which taxes them, which makes all laws for them, and which sends them to war. Our community is unsurpassed in the republic in intelligence, in public spirit, in patriotic devotion, in every distinctive American characteristic, yet is denied vital American rights and privileges, while weighed down with every national tax and war-service burden. In the privilege of access to the national courts we are degraded (the U. S. Supreme Court says) below aliens, and in political status classed with the convict and the lunatic.

2. Effective participation in local government to the full extent that the Constitution, as at present worded or amended, will permit.

3. Fair play by Congress, with its exclusive legislative power, in apportioning equitably between the taxpayers of the District and the taxpayers of the Nation (including the taxpayers of the District), the cost of maintenance and upbuilding of the Nation's city.

4. Sympathetic understanding and mutual appreciation between the Americans of Washington and the Americans of the United States, as represented in Congress. Too many of Washington's legislators come to view their Capital constituents as unappreciative, ungrateful, greedy, selfish and censorious; and too many of these constituents come to view the legislators, selected for them by the Constitution, as deliberately ignorant of their needs, as contemptuously indifferent to and neglectful of their welfare or as actively hostile. The crying need of the hour is a change of thought, a change of heart, a new policy under which each of the Capital-building partners shall heed the injunction, "Put yourself in his place!" with the result of substituting mutual appreciation for recrimination.

5. The same right to sue and be sued in the courts of the Nation as is possessed by the citizens of the States and by aliens. Remove the hurtful discrimination so forcefully pointed out by Chief Justice Marshall in delivering the opinion of the Supreme Court in the case of Hepburn vs. Ellzey, when he said: "It is extraordinary that the courts of the United States, which are open to aliens and to the citizens of other States in the Union should be closed upon them (District residents). But this is the subject for legislative, not judicial, consideration." We are now asking the legislative consideration which the Chief Justice suggests.

The birthday of an octogenarian puts in the spotlight record of the wonderful development of the Capital in the period of a single lifetime.

Washington in 1858 was the discreditable capital which had resulted from leaving a national plan of magnificent intentions to be carried into execution by a population feeble in numbers and resources and hampered by the hostility of some and by the indifference and neglect of many of its legislators and constitutional protectors.

In place of the straggling country village of 1858 with zigzag grades, no sewage, no streetcars, no water supply except from pumps and springs, unimproved reservations, second-rate dwellings and streets of mud and mire—the modern Washington has arisen America's most attractive city; the focus of national politics; a scientific, literary, educational and art center; a city of 627,000 population (census estimate 1937), sustained, improved and adorned by the annual expenditure of more than $48,000,000 as compared with approximately $4,000,000 expended in 1858; with surface remodeled; with enterprising business houses relieving Washington from dependence on its great commercial neighbors; with manufactures not imposing but respectable in view of the design to retain Washington's pre-eminence as a residence city by encouraging only light and clean manufacturing; with an elaborate and costly system of sewers and water mains; with transportation by nearly 150 miles of street railway, underground electric in urban sections; with 725 miles of broad smooth streets, shaded for several hundred miles with 123,000 trees, destined to make Washington the forest city; with dwellings showing the most varied and pleasing architecture springing up in succession where only bogs and swampy pastures were seen 80 years ago.

The progress that the Capital has made in the past 80 years, while wonderful, furnishes only the foundation upon which the new Washington of the future will be built.

Some municipal material improvements are still needed, notably in schools and a new public library, in the municipal center, in hospitals, bridges, armory, auditorium, stadium.

But the glorious future of Washington wil especially correct inequities affecting the people of Washington will especially correct the material Washington of buildings, streets and monuments.

Grateful for Honor.

Among my friends who are here tonight are many whose white hairs, or entire absence of hair, indicate that with me they must soon depart, yielding the banners of the Greater Washington which we bear to younger, stronger hands.

To our successors as standard bearers in the army which fights for Washington, we say: Push forward to attainment of the five objectives already outlined:

Develop our city materially, healthfully, intellectually, spiritually.

Continue to develop in consciousness of civic unity and as a politicall entity, the fine, strong, American community which already exisis here.

Not only make Washington the most beautiful capital in the world, but develop on lines of wisdom and equity the Washington community of over 600,000 Americans, the people who constitute the real Washington, as distinguished from the materjal shell which houses and environs them, adding to the city beautiful, the city healthful, the city wise, the city good, and, above all, an American city, not filled with political defectives and delinquents, lower in status in some respects than aliens, but populated by red-blooded Americans with the privileges and powers in national representation, at least, which belong to them by right as Americans.

Asking forgiveness for brief divergence from the evening's main objective, I thank you again and again from the bottom of my heart, my friends, for the overflowing cup of honor which you have pressed to my lips tonight.

Attache to Speak.

Tswen-ling Tsui, second secretary of the Chinese Embassy, will speak on "The Chinese Situation" at the University Club, 1135 Sixteenth street northwest, tonight at 8:30 p. m. An open forum for discussion will follow.

General Improvement 4½s, 1939; that none of the other special partners have contributed or agreed to contribute any other property except as aforesaid; that no special partner has agreed to make any additional limited capital contributions; that an affidavit of one of the general partners of said limited partnership was filed in the office of the Clerk of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia with said certificate of limited partnership and at the time of the filing of said certificate of limited partnership, stating that the sums of money specified herein to have been contributed by each of the special partners to the capital of said partnership, were actually and in good faith paid in cash to said partnership on December 31, 1937, and that the securities stated herein to have been contributed to the capital of said partnership were actually and in good faith delivered and contributed to said partnership on December 31, 1937; that the term of said partnership commenced at the close of business on December 31, 1937 and shall continue for the term of five years to and including December 31, 1942; provided, however, that the partnership may be terminated at any time, notwithstanding the foregoing, at the election of a majority in interest of the general partners, such election to be made by the general partners so electing by written notice given by such general partners to all of the other partners at least ninety days prior to the date fixed in such notice as the date upon which such termination will take effect; and provided, however, that if a partner shall have withdrawn during any calendar year by reason of death or expulsion, certain of the general partners having a majority in interest who are constituted the Executive Committee may terminate the partnership at the end of such year by notice delivered to all of the partners at any time before the end of such year; that until a termination of the partnership, no special partner shall have any right to withdraw any of his limited capital contribution, except as of the end of any calendar year, and then only if he shall have given written notice prior to October 1st in such year of his desire to make such withdrawal; and except that in the event of his death his contribution shall be repaid with interest within ninety days thereafter; provided, however, that any such withdrawals at other times may be made with the written consent of the said Executive Committee of the partnership if, as a result thereof there be then no impairment of the capital of the partnership; and provided further that if at any time the total amount of capital, both general and limited, (including any capital added after the date of this Certificate) shall have been reduced by withdrawals to less than three-quarters of the total amount of the original capital contributions both general and limited, then each special partner shall be so notified in writing by the partnership, and any special partner shall be entitled to withdraw all or any part of his limited capital contribution within ninety days after the date of such notice to him of such reduction; that until its termination, the partnership shall have no right (except in the case of an expulsion of a general partner) to return to any partner, without his consent, any portion of his capital contribution, limited or general, except as of the end of any calendar year, and then only if the partnership shall have given him written notice of its intention to make such return on or before the preceding October 1st; that the share of the profits or other compensation by way of income which each special partner shall receive by reason of his contribution is as follows: The limited capital contributions in cash, including the cash contribution of $100,000.00 of Jay Cooke, shall bear interest at the rate of 6% per annum, payable quarterly during any continuance of the partnership, to be charged and paid by the partnership whether or not earned as an expense of the business; that in addition, Jay Cooke shall receive payment at the rate of $4,387.50 per annum plus such additional sum or less such sum in any year, as may be necessary, so that the total amount paid under this paragraph for any year, when added to the aggregate amount of the coupons and interest received by him upon said securities, shall be equal to 6% per annum upon $300,000.00; that upon any proceeds of sale of any of said securities which shall not have been reinvested by the partnership in accordance with the provisions hereinafter stated, within thirty days after such sale, the partnership shall pay to Jay Cooke interest at the rate of 6% per annum for the periods during which such proceeds shall remain uninvested, but only after taking into account the pro rata part, or all, as the case may be, of the additional payment at the rate of $4,387.50 per annum as provided above, so that his total return upon all of his additional limited capital contribution shall be 6% per annum upon $300,000.00; that all of the foregoing payments of interest to Jay Cooke upon his additional limited capital contribution, other than coupons and interest received by him upon said securities, shall be charged to and be paid by the partnership, whether or not earned, as an expense of the business; that except as above stated, the limited capital contributions shall not otherwise share in profits or receive any other compensation by way of income from the partnership, nor shall they share in any losses or be decreased or impaired by any losses or other charges unless and until all general capital shall have been exhausted; That no special partner shall have any right to substitute an assignee as contributor in his place as special partner, but each special partner shall have the right to assign all or any portion of his interest as a special partner to such person or persons as he desires without such assignee becoming a partner, substituted special, special or general; that one or more additional general or special partners may be admitted from time to time to membership in said partnership upon the consent in writing of all of the partners, both special and general; that no right is given to one or more of the special partners to priority over the other special partners as to contributions nor as to compensation by way of income; that the right of the remaining general partner or general partners to continue the business on the death, retirement, or insanity of a general partner is as follows: The withdrawal of a partner as a result of death, retirement, or insanity, or otherwise, shall not of itself terminate and dissolve the partnership; if a partner shall have withdrawn during any calendar year, the Executive Committee may terminate the partnership at the end of such year by notice delivered to all of the partners at any time before the end of such year; if the partnership is terminated by the Executive Committee at the end of any year, a majority in interest of the remaining or surviving general partners shall have the right to continue the business under the firm name; That no right is given to any special partner to demand and receive property other than cash in return for his contribution, except that Jay Cooke, as a special partner, shall be entitled to the return of the securities contributed by him as aforesaid, subject, however, to the following: If said securities or any of them are sold, the proceeds thereof, or securities purchased with said proceeds, shall continue to constitute the additional limited capital contribution of Jay Cooke to the partnership; The partnership may reinvest the proceeds of the sale of any of said securities in bonds of the United States or of any state or municipality of the United States approved by Jay Cooke; upon the termination of the partnership or the withdrawal from the partnership by Jay Cooke, there shall be returned to him in repayment of his additional limited capital contribution such of the securities originally contributed by him as aforesaid, as may then be on hand, and the proceeds of the sale of any securities constituting his additional limited capital contribution not then re-invested, and any new securities then on hand which have been purchased with the proceeds of such securities sold in accordance with the provisions of this paragraph; if the partnership reinvests the proceeds, or any part thereof, of the sale of any securities constituting a part of the additional limited capital contribution of Jay Cooke in securities not authorized by, or not in accordance with, the provisions of this paragraph, he may at his option, upon the termination of the partnership or his withdrawal therefrom, either accept the unauthorized securities or require the partnership to pay to him an amount equal to the amount of the proceeds originally invested in such unauthorized securities, and in such latter event, such unauthorized securities shall become general assets of the partnership.

Bob Burns Says—

I've been listenin' to a lot of politicians talk lately and I'll bet some of them fellas have got some pretty sound argument if you could jest understand what they was talkin' about. Some of 'em are as bad as my Cousin Lobelia.

One time I told her she had a worried look and she says "Yes—I'm kinda worried about my fella." She says "I wrote him a letter and told him to forget that I had told him I didn't mean to reconsider my decision not to change my mind and he seems to have misunderstood me."

Does America Think Tom Mooney Was Guilty?

21 years ago Tom Mooney was convicted of bombing a Preparedness Parade in San Francisco. Was he guilty? Many people rank Mooney's case with France's Dreyfuss case. The Gallup Poll found that the case is familiar with Americans in every State in the Union. This Sunday the Gallup Poll tells you what America now thinks.

Custer Named Odd Fellows' Grand Master

Arlington S. Custer last night was unanimously elected grand master of the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows of the District at the annual meeting in the Odd Fellows Temple on Seventh street northwest.

The lodge also selected as its new grand officers Hiram E. Johnson, deputy grand master; Ashlan F. Harlan, grand warden; Harry L. Andresen, unanimously elected grand secretary to succeed himself for the fifteenth consecutive term, and Charles B. Lampe, succeeding himself for the fourth consecutive term as grand treasurer.

J. Burton Kincer, chief meteorologist in the Weather Bureau, was elected to the post of grand representative for a term of two years, and Linwood E. Donaldson was named to be representative to the board of trustees. Elected to be representatives of the grand lodge board of trustees were Samuel G. Taylor and George G. Wilson.

Over 400 representatives and past grands of the grand body attended the session.

Grand Master Linwood E. Donaldson presented his report to the Grand Lodge showing the order in this jurisdiction made a gain in membership and that the jurisdiction is in splendid condition. Other reports were made by Grand Secretary Harry L. Andresen, Grand Treasurer Charles B. Lampe, Grand Representative Wilfred E. Lawson and Michael E. Murray, president of the I. O. O. F. Home Association.

Burton R. Gaskill, deputy grand sire of the Sovereign Grand Lodge, from Atlantic City, was present and given an ovation by the members assembled. Grand Master Aubrey Wallace, of the jurisdiction of Virginia, and Grand Master Raymond C. Hanson, of the jurisdiction of Maryland, also attended.

The session will reconvene tonight when it will install newly elected officers.

Custer has been active in fraternal work since his admission to the order. During the World War he enlisted in the United States Army, 1917. He was transferred to Walter Reed Hospital on September 12, 1919, and then remained in this city. He then identified himself with Golden Rule Lodge, No. 21, where he served the various chairs in that lodge and became its Noble Grand. He transferred his encampment membership to Fred D. Stuart Encampment, No. 7, of this city and, became its chief patriarch. A. & P. Stores To Appeal Rule By Trade Body

By the Associated Press.

A court struggle was in prospect yesterday as a result of a decision by the Federal Trade Commission that the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. violated the so-called brokerage clause of the Robinson-Patman anti-price discrimination act.

Arthur G. Brode, counsel for the grocery chain which denied the charge, said an appeal would be taken to the Circuit Court of Appeals.

Before approval of the act, June 19, 1936, companies selling to the A. & P., the commission found, paid brokerage each month to the company's field buying agents. This brokerage, the commission said, was "in the same amount as those concerns paid to their brokers who acted for them in making sales to their other customers."

Actually, the commission said, the A. & P. buying agents rendered "no selling services whatsoever to sellers in connection with purchases made for the A. & P. Co., but . . . only buying services to their employer."

Paying of brokerage under such circumstances was forbidden by the 1936 law. The company, therefore, the commission said, instructed its agents, soon after effective date of the act, to accept no more brokerage.

But, the commission added, the company also instructed its agents to make agreements with sellers providing for payment to the A. & P. of a "quantity discount," equal to brokerage formerly paid.

During hearings, Caruthers Ewing, general counsel for the tea company, denied the charges and said a cease and desist order "would be grossly unfair to the A. & P. and would accomplish no legitimate purpose."

Mrs. Bonnin, Sitting Bull Kin, Is Dead at 62

Mrs. Gertrude Simmons Bonnin, 62, direct descendant of Sitting Bull and who was born in a Siouz tepee on the plains of South Dakota, died yesterday in Georgetown Hospital.

Wife of Capt. Raymond T. Bonnin, a World War veteran, Mrs. Bonnin, a resident of Arlington, Va., spent the major portion of her life in attempts to better the lot of the American Indian.

She was the first and only president of the National Council of American Indians, which she helped to organize 12 years ago, and had lived in and near Washington for the last 20 years.

Named Zitkala-Sa, meaining Red Bird, she early decided to leave the prairies to seek a white man's education in the East and entered Earlham College in Richmond, Ind., and later the Boston Conservatory of Music.

She became an accomplished violinist, and it was this musical trainning that she devoted to one of the last undertakings of her life—composition of an India opera, "Sun Dance," in collaboration with William F. Hanson. The opera will be produced by the New York Light Opera Guild in a few months.

She was instrumental in inducing the General Federation of Women's Clubs to install an Indian welfare department, which assisted her and her husband in gaining full citizenship rights for the American Indian.

Mrs. Bonnin is survived by, in addition to her husband, a son, Raymond O. Bonnin, Arlington; a brother, David Simmons, of Wagner, S. Dak., and four grand children.

Funeral services will be held at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow from the church of the Latter Day Saints on Sixteenth street northwest. Burial at 3 p. m. will be in Arlington Cemetery.

City Editor Dies.

Chicago, Jan. 26 (AP).—Thurman Harshman, 62, who during the 25 years he was night editor of the City News Bureau trained numerous cub reporters who later became prominent, including William L. Chenery, editor of Collier's magazine, died tonight of a heart ailment. He was born in Union City, Ohio.

Bolger Leads Parade to D. C. Of Film Stars

Eleanor Powell is scheduled to arrive at 1:25 p. m. today and Fredric March at 7:30 a. m. tomorrow. Janet Gaynor will be the last, getting in at 8:50 a. m. Saturday.

Meanwhile, it was announced that Commissioner George E. Allen was elected vice-president, and Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank, member of the finance committee of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, at the first meeting of the board of trustees in New York.

Meanwhile, sales in Government departments increased with the announcement that payment cards be extended to Monday. Only a few box seats remain for the President's Birthday Horse Show at Fort Myer February 1 and 2. Mrs. Roosevelt will participate as a rider.

Tickets to the ball will be good at any of the hotels except the gold plate breakfast at the Carlton. J. F. T. O'Connor, chairman of the breakfast, declared enough reservations already had been made to insure its success.

Utilities Purchase Favored by Norris

By the Associated Press.

Proposals for TVA purchase of private utilities in the Tennessee Valley gained the support yesterday of Senator Norris (Independent), Nebraska.

The Nebraskan, often consulted by President Roosevelt on power policy, said he believed Congress would readily approve necessary legislation if the power companies "sincerely" wanted to sell their properties.

He ridiculed, however, the proposal of Wendell L. Willkie that a board negotiate for Government purchase of Commonwealth & Southern Corporation's subsidiaries in the TVA area.

"It sounds nice on paper," Norris said, "but it's buncombe."

Norris also indicated disfavor for the suggestion by Gov. Gordon Browning of Tennessee that a State-Federal co-operative buy the utilities.

Browning has an appointment tomorrow with President Roosevelt, at which, he said, he would discuss his proposal.

Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, who is opposing the Tennessee Governor's plan, asserted Browning was trying to court White House favor.

He predicted both the Governor and his appointee, Senator Berry (Democrat), of Tennessee, would be defeated for renomination if they pushed Browning's proposal.

Henry Glassie, U. S. Attorney, Is Dead Here

Represented Government Many Times in D. C.-Va. Boundary Rows.

Henry H. Glassie, 66, of 117 West Bradley Lane, Chevy Chase, Md., special assistant United States Attorney-General since 1927, died yesterday at Garfield Hospital. He had been ill since Sunday.

For more than 20 years Mr. Glassie's legal career had brought him into the thick of controversy over land condemnation and land litigation in the District. He represented the Government many times in court battles over the District-Virginia boundary and over the question of condemning buildings for the Federal Triangle.

During the past ten years, almost from the time he was appointed assistant to the Attorney General, Mr. Glassie had been blind. His blindness did not interfere with his work and he continued to plead cases in court.

At one time, Mr. Glassie was nominated to the bench of the Supreme Court of the District, but the Senate did not confirm the appointment.

Born in Nashville, Tenn., Mr. Glassie had lived in the District since he was 2 years old. He received an A. B. degree from Johns Hopkins University, later studied law at Columbian College, now George Washington University. He held an honorary degree of master of laws from National University.

Admitted to the District bar in 1894, he was appointed assistant United States attorney for the District in 1902. The following year he was assigned to special duties in the Attorney General's office and placed in charge of cases involving second-class mailing privilege. He continued in this work until 1907 and in 1906 served as secretary to the joint Congressional committee on second-class mail matter.

He served as special counsel for the joint Congressional committee for codification of postal laws in 1908. During the next few years he devoted much time to teaching at National University College of Law.

Placed in charge of land litigation cases and condemnation proceedings in the District in 1914 he was again named in 1921 special Assistant Attorney General.

Mr. Glassie was appointed a member of the United States Tariff Commission in 1923 and held office there until 1927. Since that year he had been special assistant United States Atorney General. In 1934 and 1935 he appeared as United States counsel before the Virginia-District of Columbia Boundary Commission.

He was a member of the American Bar Association, the District Bar Association, Phi Beta Kappa and the Chevy Case Club.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Gertrude Caffery Glassie, daughter of the late Senator Donelson Caffery, of Louisiana; two sons, Donelson Caffery Glassie, consulting engineer in Washington, and Henry H. Glassie, jr., attorney in New York City, and a daughter, Miss Gertrude Caffery Glassie, assistant librarian in the legislative reference service at the Library of Congress.

Fordham Professor Scores War Sirens

New York, Jan. 26 (AP).—The Rev. Ignatius W. Cox, professor of ethics at Fordham University, tonight denounced "propaganda by insidious and siren voices" that this country should join France, England and Russia in an "economic boycott of so-called aggressor nations."

Propaganda, he said in a speech before the Catholic conference on industrial problems, would lead to war, economic or military, and would put the country "in the toils of the totalitarian state, either Communist of Fascist."

Photographer Dies

J. A. NESENSOHN.

Stomach Ailment Fatal to White House Group. President.

J. A. Nesensohn, 38, chief of the Acme Newspictures Bureau here and president of the White House Photographers Association, died yesterday in Emergency Hospital after an illness of several months.

Only last week Mr. Nesensohn was taken to the hospital, where he underwent an operation for a stomach ailment. He resided with his mother, his wife and his two children in Langley, Va.

Son of the late T. Nesensohn, one of the Nation's pioneer newspaper photographers, Mr. Nesensohn was noted for some of the stories of world importance he covered with his camera. Among these was the notorious St. Valentine's Day mass murder in Chicago.

Mr. Nesensohn had been chief of the Acme Bureau here for six years. He was a native of Sheepshead Bay, N. Y., and entered the photographic field with World Wide Photos in New York 18 years ago. He was put in charge of the Wide World Bureau in Chicago in 1922, then became chief of the Chicago office of Acme in 1924. Later he was transferred to Cleveland, and he came to Washington in 1932.

Surviving Mr. Nesensohn are his wife, his mother, his children, Alice 15, and John, 13, and a brother, Carl, who is a photographer with the New York Times.

Funeral arrangements had not been completed late yesterday.

1st Blind Landing Made by Airliner

Undaunted by 6½ hours spent in a fog-bound airliner Monday night, Philip King, Maritime Commission employe, yesterday took part in the first blind landing of a commercial airliner on a regularly scheduled flight.

The flight, culmination of nine years of developmental work by former Bureau of Standards scientists, was made by a twin-motored Pennsylvania-Central plane which flew from Washington Airport to Pittsburgh, Pa., where it landed by means of the new radio instrument.

Monday night King and C. C. Bane, manager of a Washington shoe store, were passengers on a plane which set out from New York, bound for Washington, and landed finally at Hartford, Conn.

Roosevelt Gets $1,029 Refund From Treasury

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury collected $1,029 too much in taxes from a person listed as "Franklin D. Roosevelt, Washington," and had to give it back.

Or perhaps Mr. Roosevelt made the mistake and paid too much income tax.

At any rate, the $1,029 was part of $32,253,803 in tax refunds which thousands of individuals and firms received in the year ended June 30.

A list of refunds of $500 or more was made public yesterday by the House Expenditures Committee.

The largest single check, for $1,458,100, went to Arthur C. James, New York financier. The Equitable Life Assurance of New York got two totaling $1,316,939.

The only other refund in the million-dollar class was $1,126,641 to the American Gas & Electric and affiliated companies, also of New York.

All those refunds represented overpayment of income taxes, but refunds of other taxes also were listed.

Chairman Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri of the Expenditures Committee said the Treasury had granted tax credits and abatements of $170,442,611 in the last fiscal year. Offsetting these and refunds, he said, were $399,448,703 of additional assessments.

Among refunds to New Yorkers were $48,657 to John D. Rockefeller, $4,702 to Edna Ferber, the author, and $7,409 on processing taxes to Warden Lewis E. Lawes of Sing Sing Prison.

Refunds in California went to Constance Bennett, Hollywood actress, who received $1,312; Ronald Colman, $4,791; Marion Davies, $1,178, and Edna May Oliver, $692.

Lammot duPont, jr., received $5,054; Pierre S. duPont, $5,959, and Hubert I. duPont, $1,045.

Sliding Scale Privilege Tax Seems Certain

A graduated scale for the business privilege tax was tentatively approved by the House sub-committee on fiscal affairs yesterday and is expected to be adopted in final draft of the new revenue bill.

Aimed at eliminating inequities, the scale would reduce the gross receipts levy for business concerns which operate on small profit margins.

Last year the class of business men that complained loudest against the tax were produce dealers and others who said their profits were only 1 per cent of their gross receipts and that two-fifths of 1 per cent levy therefore amounted to an income tax of 40 per cent.

Under the proposed revision, as explained by Chairman Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, the tax scale will begin at one-tenth of 1 per cent on businesses in which the gross profit is less than 3 per cent.

When the profit is between 3 and 6 per cent, the tax will be two-tenths of 1 per cent. From 6 to 9 per cent profit, the tax will be three-tenths of 1 per cent, and on profits of more than 9 per cent, the tax will be two-fifths of 1 per cent.

Nichols said that profit would be interpreted as the difference between cost and sale price of any products. The cost, he added, would be considered the wholesale purchase price plus the prevailing freight rate to Washington.

Another amendment to the privilege tax tentatively approved would require that returns be filed whenever gross business is in excess of $1,000 although the $2,000 primary exemption is to be retained.

Exports Show Increase Over Imports in '37

Merchandise Sent Abroad Exceeded Purchases by $261,597,000.

By the Associated Press.

United States merchandise exports in 1937 exceeded imports by $261,597,000, the Commerce Department announced yesterday.

Exports, gaining $889,680,000 over 1936, totaled $3,345,658,000. Imports amounted to $3,084,061,000, an increase of $661,469,000.

The export balance of $261,597,000 was piled up in the last few months of the year and brought the United States back after a lapse of a year to the position of a predominantly export country. In 1936 the export balance was only $33,386,000, the lowest figure in more than 35 years.

The foreign trade situation, described by officials as one of the brightest spots in the current business picture, was affected last year by wars abroad and by good crops at home, they said.

In the first part of the year imports ran ahead of exports; largely because of heavy purchases of foreign food products as a result of the 1936 drought in this country. Late in the summer bountiful crops here reversed the food shipments situation and was a major factor in piling up the largest export balance at the end of the year. Wars and re-armaments in other parts of the world also increased demand for American machinery, airplanes and other items.

In the last few months of the year imports declined substantially, compared with the same month of the previous year. The department said December imports totaled $208,863,000, compared with $245,161,000 in December, 1936. December exports totaled $319,756,000, compared with $229,800,000 in the same month of the previous year.

The increase in exports included, the department said, larger shipments of wheat and other grains and feeds, lard, dairy products, leaf tobacco, automobiles, trucks, industrial machinery, agricultural implements and wood and paper products.

Last December's $39,710,000 exports of motor vehicles and parts were the largest for any month since July, 1929, and the month's $24,122,000 shipments of industrial machinery were the largest since March, 1929.

D. C. May Use WPA Funds for School Lunches

Other Sources Considered, Auditor Donovan Says After Conference.

Possibility that WPA and other funds would be made available for the defunct school lunch fund was voiced last night by District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan following a conference of Federal WPA, D. C. Public Assistance and Board of Education officials.

Maj. Donovan refused to comment further on the amount available until he reports to the District Commissioners, probably this morning.

Coincidentally, Maj. Donovan asked Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal yesterday for an opinion on whether to turn over a balance of approximately $2,000 in the school lunch trust fund to the Citizens Permanent Committee on the Feeding of Hungry School Children.

Mrs. John Boyle, jr., president of the permanent committee, had asked the Commissioners to release the money to her organization to pay a $1,400 milk bill the committee contracted during the first two weeks of January.

The money was turned over to Donovan by the citizens emergency committee, which was succeeded by the permanent committee, and he has refused to relinquish it until the permanent committee produces legal evidence that they are entitled to it.

Tomorrow is the last day that 5,200 school children in the District will have food delivered to them at lunch time, if funds are not available.

The District Commissioners will ask the Budget Bureau for a deficiency appropriation of $34,000 to finance the lunches until the close of this school year.
